Rose Coghlan Gone
Russia May Laugh
Mussolini in 4 Languages
Taxes Educate Us

—By Arthur Brisbane—

ROSE COGHLAN is dead, 80 years old. To ninety Americans out of a hundred this means nothing. To the other ten it means much. It takes them back to the days when Augustin Daly was young, with Ada Rehan and John Drew in their prime, to days before Weber and Fields or Warfield or Marcus Loew or any moving picture.

Those that are now "great," with names spelled in large letters, will soon be as thoroughly forgotten as Rose Coghlan, Ada Rehan and Daly.

Life is a succession of shadows, and its meaning a mystery to the shadows that move through it.

The national child labor committee reports that 700,000 children from 10 to 15 years old are at work in this country, and in addition, 300,000 between 16 and 17 years of age are employed in "unsuitable occupations."

Our glorious country, which has from six to eight million men unable to find work, has at work one million children that ought to be in school.

And we criticize the Russians, and tell them how to run their country. They must laugh.

Wise is Mussolini. Honoring the 100th anniversary of Goethe's death, he dedicated in Rome an institute of German studies in a magnificent villa donated by Mrs. Henrietta Tower Wurts, an American. He spoke in German, English, French and Italian, because Goethe, like all geniuses, belongs to all nations and all languages.

Many of Goethe's lines might be adopted by Mussolini, applying them to himself.

Es liebt die Welt das strahlende zu schauerzen. "The world loves to besmirch that which is brilliant."

Also, "Courage lost, everything lost, better thou were never born," and Goethe's statement that personality is the greatest gift that earth's children can possess.

It is important that citizens take an interest in their government. Therefore, news that New York riders on street, subway and elevated car lines will be taxed on each ride is good news.

Every time the harassed New Yorker is forced to add one or two cents to his fare as a contribution to government, he will remember that it might be a good idea to take an interest in that government and know something about it.

It has been often predicted here during the happy, boom years for 1929 and previously that sooner or later this country would PAY for the war, and would not enjoy paying.

Our fair land is paying for its war now.

However, if citizens can be persuaded to take henceforward as much interest in their government as they usually take in the selection of a spring or fall overcoat, the cost of the war will not be too great.

Wall Street has one of its frequent fits of the "trembles." Brokers naturally object to taxation that would take $29 in taxes on every hundred shares of stock sold at par. However, that tax need not necessarily discourage speculation. He who buys 100 shares at par expects to make at least $5 a share, or $500. A $29 tax will not make him abandon an imaginary profit of $500. Speculators are optimistic.

The worst, from the broker's point of view, is that rates on the stock exchange that once sold above $500,000 each are now selling as low as $80,000.

Big speculators will probably buy seats and save money hereafter by hiring $2 brokers to do their buying and selling, instead of paying regular commissions.

Finland abandoned prohibition and there was rejoicing.

But Finland's government will sell the liquor to the citizens, and now whiskey is at $6.50 a bottle, brandy $9 a bottle, and there is wailing and gnashing of Finnish teeth.

Those prices are as high as American bootleg prices. But there is a difference.

The enormous profit in Finland goes to the government, to be used for old age and unemployment funds, and the profits of illegal liquor traffic, and government expenses generally.

In this fair land the hundreds of millions of annual profit go to the bootleggers, and to officials that collect their share of bootleg profits.

Nine Democratic leaders, including Roosevelt, Smith and Garner, predict a Democratic sweep next fall. IF the 1,000,000 chosen Democrats to whom they send an appeal, and other Democrats, will organize AND CONTRIBUTE.

That word "contribute" will cause many to pause. After the people have finished contributing to the taxes that Congress has "dug up," many will be contribution-weary.

2 OF 6 'HONOR JURORS' ARE WHITE MEN

Darrow Wins a Point to Show Slaying of Hawaiian Justified by "Unwritten Law"

By GILBERT PARKER
International News Service Correspondent.

Honolulu, T. H., April 5 (INS)—Armed with a court decision which he considered highly favorable to his case, Clarence Darrow, grizzled veteran of the law, today continued his battle in defense of Mrs. Granville Fortescue, American society woman, and her three companions.

The four defendants are charged with the "honor lynching" of Joseph Kahahawai, a native, accused with four others of having attacked Mrs. Thalia Massie, daughter of Mrs. Fortescue and wife of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, who is on trial with his mother-in-law.

Battling over the polyglot jury that will hear the case, a decision was drawn from Judge Charles S. Davis which Darrow said would aid his case.

UNWRITTEN LAW DEFENSE

The decision rests over the guilt or innocence of Kahahawai on the attack charges, and Darrow was permitted to follow a line of questioning which suggested that the "unwritten law" will play a prominent part in the defense.

The words of Judge Davis which Darrow considered as an aid to his case were:

"If a juror has no opinion and has a free and open mind, the question of the guilt or innocence of the decease does not arise."

Previously Darrow had been quoted cautioning veniremen to whether or not they had an opinion concerning Kahahawai's past, when the prosecution, headed by John K. Kelley, objected, saying any acts previous to Kahahawai's death had no bearing on the case.

The judge's statement was interpreted by the defense as permitting a line of questioning that will bring the question of the attack on Mrs. Massie before the jury.

Only two of the six jurors tentatively passed for cause on the second day of the trial opened were white men. Two were Japanese, one a Hawaiian and one Chinese.

POLICE BAR CROWD

Special details of police kept the throng behind the lines established about the courthouse. Special passes admitted the few favored to the courtroom.

DOCTOR SAYS SHE BEGGED HIM TO KILL

Defense in Mrs. Filipiak's Trial for Life Fails to Bar the State's Star Witness

Dr. Hyman Meyers of Chelsea testified in Superior Court today that Mrs. Michelina Filipiak, now on trial for the murder of her husband, asked him for poison for her husband and offered him $1000 of the insurance money.

Dr. Meyers said he refused and a few days later he was called to the Filipiak home in Arlington st., Chelsea, and found the husband, Wladislaw, suffering from what appeared to be arsenic poisoning. Death occurred within a week.

While the physician related these incidents and others, which he said took place at the Filipiak home the two little daughters of the defendant sat near their mother and listened. The children are Stella, 12, and Jessie, 9.

TELLS OF HER VISIT

In Dr. Meyers' story the spectators filling the courtroom received their first thrills, after hours of testimony about insurance policies which had been taken out on Wladislaw Filipiak's life.

The doctor's testimony went in over repeated objections by defense counsel, Atty. Edward M. Shanley.

"On November 18, 1930, I went into my office and found Mrs. Filipiak there," said Dr. Meyers.

"Mrs. Filipiak told me she had many bills to meet, taxes, insurance and payments on the home and did not have any money. I asked her what she came to me for.

"She said, 'You can help me a lot.'"

ALL CAMPS ON VINEYARD SEARCHED FOR BABY

Activity in Hunt Centers in Islands Off Southern Coast of Massachusetts

The Lindbergh baby kidnaping case appeared to be approaching a climax of some sort in extraordinary activities off the Massachusetts coast today.

That this climax may be a happy one was indicated in an air of optimism, more pronounced than at any time within a month in the Lindbergh home in Hopewell, N. J.

While Col. Lindbergh's flying companion, used by him yesterday in his second flight to Marthas Vineyard, was being overhauled at Teterboro Airport, N. J., apparently in preparation for another spectacular dash to contact the kidnapers, six developments were reported from the islands and mainland of southern Massachusetts.

An additional development was a second conference in London between Scotland Yard officials and Maj. Charles E. Schoeffel of the New Jersey state police, who is now believed to be en route to Glasgow to question relatives of Betty Gow, the baby's nurse.

1—State police, town officers and constables began a systematic search of all summer camps in the six townships on Martha's Vineyard on the possibility that the baby is hidden on the island.

2—Mysterious light signals exchanged between an auto on the Vineyard and a boat lying off shore at 2 o'clock this morning led to the belief that kidnapers contact boat may have been receiving instructions in anticipation of a third flight by Col. Lindbergh.

3—A Martha's Vineyard radio operator intercepted a shore-to-ship message stating that Col. Lindbergh's plane was being fitted with pontoons, indicating an expected landing at sea.

4—The fishing boat Alva, believed to have carried John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk (Va.) negotiator, out of Chilmark on the Vineyard Sunday night, was still somewhere "at sea," and Curtis was still missing from home. (His wife, returning home today after an absence of more than a week, would not say where she had been.)

QUIGLEY DROPS POLICEMAN

Mayor Quigley of Chelsea today ordered suspended from the Chelsea police force, "in the interests of economy," Patrolman George S. Batten, 53, a Chelsea policeman for more than twenty years.

Batten, it was revealed, was the only city employe to refuse the mayor's request to sign a statement pledging 10 per cent of his pay to the city's unemployment relief.

The mayor's order was sent to Chief of Police Charles M. Finn, who effected the suspension today.

A hearing, automatically granted a suspended city employe, will be given Batten Friday morning in the mayor's office.

Hoover Will Toss Ball in Sox Game

Washington, April 5 (AP)—President Hoover will limber up his throwing arm next Monday, tossing out the first ball in Griffith Stadium to open the big league season.

Wearing a broad smile, he today remarked to newspapermen about his desk that he was looking forward to attending the opening game—a contest between the Washington Senators and the Boston Red Sox.

Builder Drops Dead in Lawyer's Office

While discussing a contract in the office of his attorney, Joseph Foster, 65, of Seafoam ave., Winthrop, builder and real estate operator, collapsed and was pronounced dead when a physician arrived.

'SUICIDE' TRY IS CALLED FAKE

Charging Mrs. Rose Fogelman of Pine st., Swampscott, with "faking" a suicide attempt to avoid trial for larceny, Atty. Arthur Fielding today requested the Lynn court to investigate her reported illness.

The woman is accused by Atty. Fielding's client, Mrs. Fannie Schaback, of larceny of $1000 over expenses drawn from a savings bank when Mrs. Fogelman was attending the complainant during an illness.

Fielding told the court that the "suicide" connection proved to be a harmless mixture of soda when Mrs. Fogleman was taken to Lynn Hospital.

James Hazen Hyde's Wife Asks Divorce

Boston, Paris, April 5 (AP)—Mrs. James Hazen Hyde, the former Countess Maniuchka, has filed suit for divorce on the grounds of desertion, it was disclosed today. She married Hyde at Versailles in December, 1930.

BLOOD-STAINED CAR PURSUED

Reports of an automobile speeding through Hartford, Ct., with blood dripping from between both rear doors, sent the police into action today.

The automobile is reported to be registered to Ralph Westgate, an insurance broker, living in Cedar st., Dedham.

The hunt for the automobile began when Hartford police headquarters were deluged with telephone calls telling them of the machine and its trail of blood.

Frommy Dedham police headquarters Inspector Peter Flannigan was sent to the Westgate home, but no one was at home. He was ordered to make an investigation to determine whether Westgate's auto or plates had been stolen.

"Stimson to Stick to Arms Issue"—Hoover

Washington, April 5 (INS)—President Hoover today again declared emphatically there will be no "discussion or negotiation" on the question of European debts by Secretary of State Stimson during his forthcoming visit to Geneva.

Stimson's visit is solely in the interest of securing some concrete and definite results from the general disarmament conference, the President declared.

Los Angeles Off on Training Flight

Lakehurst, N. J., April 5 (INS)—The United States Navy airship Los Angeles left the Naval air station today on a routine training flight. Commander Fred T. Berry announced he would pilot the craft over Trenton, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Cape May. It was expected to return to Lakehurst tonight and if weather conditions are favorable will make a night trailing flight.

Round 2, City Hall Bout Won by 'Pat' Sheehan

Round two of the "Battle of City Hall Annex" was fought in Municipal Court today.

The battle started six weeks ago in the sub-basement of the annex, but wasn't disclosed until the principals were arraigned today on charges of assault.

They're in their corners. The gong! Twitchell leads a stiff verbal right.

"Well, your honor, I was in my underwear just coming on duty when the chief started arguing with me about valves and engines.

"All of a sudden he hit me three or four times in the face, knocked me down and kicked me."

Newspapermen awarded Sheehan the first round, when it was revealed that Twitchell was confined to the City Hospital for five weeks under treatment for a brain concussion, black eyes, multiple contusions of the face scalp, body, both legs and lacerations of the lips.

Ex-Speaker Young's Automobile Stolen

BREACH AMONG IRISH CABINET MEMBERS WIDENS

REPLY ON OATH IS SENT TO BRITAIN

Belief Grows That De Valera's Official Family Can't Hold Together Much Longer

Dublin, April 5 (INS)—The Irish Free State reply to the British note on the oath and annuities question, unanimously approved at a cabinet meeting late last night, was dispatched to London today.

The Free State high commissioner in London will present it to J. H. Thomas, minister for the Dominions, tomorrow.

The feeling was prevalent today that the present cabinet, which split definitely throughout the oath debate, could not hold together much longer — that the breach has been widened to such an extent that it cannot be bridged.

Although the various ministers would not discuss whether the final draft of the reply had been approved without bitter debate, which is known to have shaken previous meetings, it was apparent that no great amount of cordiality existed between two groups, definitely opposed.

The supporters of President Eamonn De Valera left together in one group, while his foes, who demanded and obtained a reply more moderately worded than De Valera's and leaving the way open for negotiations, departed in another group.

Observers, although predicting an eventual cabinet breakup, felt that there would be no general election until after the Eucharistic Congress later in the year.

BANK FAILURES SUBSIDE, SAYS A. M. POPE

Tide Definitely Turned for Better, Investment Association Head Tells N. E. Members

The tide of bank failures has definitely turned for the better, New England members of the Investment Bankers' Association of America were told today by their president, Allan M. Pope of New York.

With Allen H. Little, executive vice president, Pope was guest of honor at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon over which Laurence G. Tighe presided.

The meeting was one of a scr's to be held in principal cities of the country in a nationwide effort of the association to co-operate with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"CAUSE FOR CONCERN"

"We had cause for concern when banks failed at the rate they were failing and when that concern developed we were confronted with the very cause of bank failure," Pope said.

"But the tide of bank failures has definitely turned, due largely to the work of the new corporation.

"They are fearless, able and sound-thinking men. Their job is to stop bunks failing, with the aid of the public.

CORPORATION WINS.

"The proof of the value of the corporation is embodied in figures of bank failures in recent months.

"For the week ending March 19 only five banks in the country were closed and seven banks were opened. These figures indicate without question of doubt that the tide of bank failures has been turned."

Pope emphasized in other sections of his talk the need for balanced budgets in governmental operations, both state and national.

HOOVER OFFERS PLAN TO SAVE $200,000,000

Garner Warns President It Is Too Late This Session for Action by Commission

Washington, April 5 (AP)—Answering congressional attacks upon his economy suggestions, President Hoover said today that without the creation of a joint congressional - administration committee to consider the question he could "see no way by which there can be a maximum reduction in expenditures."

Only a short while before, Speaker Garner had told newspapermen that if the President sent to the Capitol specific suggestions for cutting Federal cash outlays, the House would approve them and do it quickly.

TELLS THREE WAYS TO CUT

Mr. Hoover, at his semi-weekly press conference, outlined "three general directions" in which he believes Federal expenses may be reduced by as much as $200,000,000 in an effort to balance the budget in conjunction with the new tax bill.

Referring to one of these, reorganization and consolidation of government functions, he asserted he had recommended such a step seven distinct times but that "the action recommended has not been taken."

The other two directions were direct reduction of appropriations and alteration of existing laws to reduce present unnecessary functions.

"LATE," SAYS GARNER

In the Senate, Chairman Jones of the appropriations committee introduced legislation to carry out the presidential suggestion for a commission to go into the question.

Speaker Garner, in guaranteeing House action on specific administration proposals, said "If Mr. Hoover has nothing to recommend, that is a different matter and it is mighty late in the session for him to try to get anything done through a commission."

$1000 DEATH BID IS REVEALED

whole lot.' 'I said, 'In what way?' Then she said: 'I have got $5000 Insurance on my husband. He's got consumption and has been sick for the past year and hasn't been working for a year.'

BARES POISON PLOT

"'I'd like to poison him. If you give me something for it, I'll give you $1000 of the insurance money.'

"I told the woman she was crazy—that we cured people, not poisoned them. I told her to forget it. Being in a hurry I walked out of the office and got in my machine."

He said Mrs. Filipiak followed him out and he instructed Mrs. Ruth K. Langh of Washington ave., Chelsea, whom he was driving home from the hospital, to "take a good lok at her." Mrs. Langh was also a witness and described the incident.

Dr. Meyers further testified that on Sunday, November 23, four days after the first occurrence, he was called to the Filipiak home and that Mrs. Filipiak told him that her husband had been drinking moonshine the night before and had become violently ill during the night, with burning pains in his stomach.

"The pains and symptoms were very similar to those with arsenic poisoning," said the witness. "I prescribed bismuth nitrate and milk of magnesia and told her to give him milk and egg water to counteract a metallic poison.

BEGGED HIM TO LIE

"She called me into the front room as I was leaving and she told me, 'If you sign a death certificate that he died of consumption, I'll give you $1000 just the same.'

"I told her there was no question of a death certificate as yet, because he wasn't dead, but when the time came to sign a certificate, if it did come, I would certify to the cause as what it was—poison.

"She said: 'If you sign the death certificate, no one would know the difference.' I told her that her husband should be sent to a hospital, but she said she wouldn't think of a hospital.

"On the way back to my office I stopped at the police station and told the whole thing. The next day I received a call to the Filipiak house again. I told the police and they advised me to 'see it through.' I also told Fr. Adamski.

SAYS SHE WANTED WILL

"I found the patient very much improved. Mrs. Filipiak asked me to witness her husband's will. I said I would not, but would take her son to a lawyer's whose office was next to me. The boy came along with me, but the lawyer was out. Every time I was at the house she talked of the death certificate."

Dr. Maurice Clayman of Chestnut st testified to being called to the Filipiak home at 3 a. m. on Nov. 28 and finding the man dying.

"At 8:30 or 9 o'clock," he continued, "Mrs. Filipiak and another woman came to my office and asked me to sign a death certificate. She was very insistent. I said I couldn't do it as I knew nothing about the case."

GIRL IS HUNTED IN ROBBERY

The sweetheart of a well-known criminal who has been tentatively identified as one of the trio who held up and robbed a State st. Trust Company bank car of $2800, is being sought in a Boston suburb today.

Sergt. Frank Gilman and Special Officer Joseph Conlon of the Back Bay station received an underworld tip as to her whereabouts and left the city to question her.

Capt. John M. Anderson also assigned two detectives to watch the criminal's haunts in Roxbury, after urging members of the detective bureau to maintain the efficient record of the past month.

At the same time police criticised the type of vehicle used by the bank, pointing out that it was an ordinary delivery truck without the proper locks and safeguards.

Identification of one of the holdup men was made by Seth E. Brown, of North Monroe st., Dorchester, chauffeur-guard, who was disarmed during the robbery. He viewed photographs in the rogues' gallery and picked out one of the men.

The holdup was staged in daylight in the heart of the medical center. The bank car was parked in Vila st. and the collector had just entered the Longwood Medical building to make a collection when the bandit sedan turned into Vila st. Two men, one masked, approached Brown and forced him to put up his hands. He was relieved of his gun and the bag of money taken from the car. The bandits also took the ignition key to prevent pursuit.

They fled to their sedan, where a confederate awaited, and sped away. The loot consisted of $2000 cash and $800 in checks just collected from the Children's Hospital and other institutions.

Breakwater at Winthrop Favored

The question of dredging channels and building breakwaters occupied attention of the House ways and means committee at the State House today.

Arguing for a breakwater for Winthrop, Sen. Conde Brodbine of Revere declared it would stop a leak in the public treasury.

He said the Metropolitan District Commission admitted having spent $70,000 in two years for repairs on the present sea wall, and had a breakwater been built five years ago this amount and more would have been saved.

Rep. Augustine Airols of Revere, member of the metropolitan affairs committee, said his committee was convinced a breakwater was the only satisfactory solution of the Winthrop problem.

Rep. Thomas F. Carroll of Revere said it would mean a saving of thousands to both state and citizens.

Edward G. Morris of Wollaston spoke on a bill providing for dredging the channel and basin in Quincy Bay adjacent to the Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs. He said it would benefit thousands who go to Wollaston to view yacht races, and would also be helpful in the saving of human life. He estimated the cost at $12,000 or $13,000 for a channel 60 feet wide and six feet deep at mean low tide.

Edwin A. Poland of Quincy said the Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs are the only life-saving stations in Quincy Bay, but are unable to function as such because of mud which has seeped in.

KEATON FAMILY SPLIT MENDED

Los Angeles, April 5 (AP)—Differences between Buster Keaton, screen comedian, and his wife, the former Natalie Talmadge, apparently have been settled after coming to the attention of the district attorney's office here and the San Diego police.

The trouble arose, Keaton and his wife said, when he took his two sons, Joe, 9, and Robert, 8, for an airplane ride yesterday. Mrs. Keaton said she did not want her sons to make the trip.

Learning the father had taken the boys and their governess to San Diego by plane, Mrs. Keaton and her sister, Mrs. Constance Talmadge Netcher, hurried to the office of Dist. Atty. Buron Fitts, who telephoned San Diego police to stop the comedian.

Keaton was held in San Diego more than an hour. Then he was freed. He, his sons and the governess were to return to Los Angeles today.

"Any report that Buster and I have separated is nonsense," said Mrs. Keaton. "One doesn't separate over such arguments."

"It was just a little family difficulty," the comedian stated. "There's nothing to the whole thing—it's so trivial."

Sir Rennell Rodd to Quit Politics

London, April 5 (AP)—Sir Rennell Rodd, Conservative member of the House of Commons, announced his retirement from native politics today after a distinguished career.

"We have turned the most difficult corner," he said, "and I feel that the country is safe and that its destinies are in the most capable hands."

CHINESE MAYOR ACCUSES JAPS

Shanghai, April 5 (INS)—The office of Wu Te-Chen, Chinese mayor of Shanghai, today charged the Japanese with attempting to form an independent municipal administration in the Chapei area in opposition to the greater Shanghai municipality.

The Japanese were accused in an official statement of using parties discontented with the administration backbone of the maneuver. The Japanese denied all knowledge of the charges, declaring if they existed it was the result of the failure of Wu's office to control the area.

FINNS STORM RUM SHOPS

Helsingfors, Finland, April 5 (AP)—Hundreds of Finland's citizens lined up before Helsingfors' liquor shops this morning for the first legal sale of liquor in 13 years.

The first arrivals began to gather before the doors at 5 a. m., although the shops were not to open until 10. The longest lines were in the working class sections. Order prevailed everywhere.

'Fawcett,' Lost 7 Years in Jungle, Spurns Aid Offer

Washington, April 5 (AP)—Telling Araujo, who believes he saw Col. P. H. Fawcett, English explorer, lost for seven years, in the Brazilian jungle about 1927, today said the Colonel may be a voluntary exile from civilization.

A meeting in the jungle with an Englishman who said he was "not going back" to civilization was described by Araujo, son of a Brazilian rubber exporter and now a resident here.

Araujo said he led an expedition in 1925 into the Matto Grosso jungle. They traveled down the Madeira and Gupore rivers and camped at the head of a tributary, the River of St. John.

"One afternoon I was walking through the jungle," he said, "when I saw a white man. When he saw me he walk edfor me to approach. He was about 50, of medium height, blond, with blue eyes and a long beard. His khaki shorts were tattered, his shirt falling to pieces. On his feet were native rubber shoes.

"I asked him who he was and if he were lost.

"'I am an Englishman,' he said, 'and I am not lost.'

"He told me he lived with Indians at a place 10 days away.

"I said to him, 'Don't you want to go back to your home?' and he said, 'Never! I hate that life.'

"I looked straight at him and said: 'Are you Col. Fawcett?'

"'Never mind about that,' he replied. 'I am not going back.' He carried no gun, but was armed with a belt knife.

"When he walked away in the jungle, I saw he wanted no one to follow him, so I, too, went my way."

Watertown Man Hurt in Car Crash

Francis W. Thompson of 18 Melendy ave., Watertown, was injured today when his automobile overturned after colliding with another car driven by James H. Garney of 59 Devon st., Marlboro. The collision was at Columbia st. and Broadway, Cambridge.

Thompson was pulled from the wreckage of his car and taken to Cambridge Relief hospital where it was found he had injuries of the head, left side and knee. He was held for observation. Carney was not injured.

Mrs. Helen Lubitsch to Wed Young Broker

Hollywood, April 5—Mrs. Helene Lubitsch, divorced wife of Ernst Lubitsch, noted motion picture director, is engaged to Albert Edward Smith, 29-year-old stock broker and sportsman.

No date has been set for the wedding. Mrs. Lubitsch said yesterday. They may be married at any time, although she did not think it would be soon.

Smith is a member of a wealthy family of Winnipeg, Canada, is attempting to establish himself in the brokerage business in Los Angeles, Mrs. Lubitsch said. She and Smith met a year ago. Smith is internationally known as a hockey player.

FIREMEN FIGHT TO KEEP DYING GIRL ALIVE

Force Oxygen Into Lungs of East Boston Pneumonia Victim; Crisis Near

With the shadow of death all about them, firemen continued today their grim fight to save Bernice Ardito, 15, of 160 Putnam st., East Boston.

The girl is a victim of double lobar pneumonia, and the struggle to save her with oxygen and a fire department inhalator went into its third day shortly before noon.

"She has a fighting chance," said Dr. Pasquale Scelso. "But for the firemen, she would have been dead 24 hours ago."

The little room in which the child lies unconscious, and breathing only because of the inhalator, has become an arena in which the fight against death is being waged.

At the bedside is Fire Lieut. John Blakeley, directing the work of 12 firemen of Ladder 31, who are working in relays. Also the day nurse, Miss Louise Coyle, who relieved Miss Katherine Killion, night nurse, at breakfast time as usual.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ardito, stand at the bedroom door and watch, silently and in prayer.

Two sisters, Jennie, ten, and Patrina, nine, and a cousin, Annetta Accardi, come and go, carrying the news of the progress of the fight to their chums and neighbors.

The whole district has its thoughts in the room where Bernice lies helpless, the mask of the inhalator over her mouth and nose, candles and vigil lights burning nearby and a crucifix on the wall above her head.

Several physicians, in addition to Dr. Scelso, who pays frequent visits to his patient, expressed keen interest in the outcome of the battle. Fifteen tanks of oxygen have been used, a record number, according to doctors.

FACES CROWDED TRIBUNAL WITH POISED CALM

Mrs. Massie's Mother Principal Figure in "Honor Slaying" at Honolulu

By JEAN HOBBS
International News Service Special Correspondent.

Honolulu, T. H., April 5 (INS)—A heroic mother who came halfway around the world to lend the sustaining strength of her love and understanding to her daughter in an hour of sore trial today was the central figure in the unusual "honor slaying" drama unfolding here in the "Hall of the Chiefs."

Grace Hubbard Fortescue, mother of Thalia Massie, victim of a horrible assault, with three others, accused of the murder of one of her daughter's alleged assailants, faced the crowded courtroom with poised calm.

Attired in a smart dark maroon ensemble with matching, close-fitting hat, the Eastern society matron appeared a serenely confident figure in a courtroom that mirrored this exotic, cosmopolitan crossroads of the Pacific.

SHOWS EFFECTS OF ORDEAL

She seemed thinner, quieter and spiritually subdued.

The proud social leader listened intently to the questioning of the jurors. Clasping and unclasping her hands, she leaned forward to follow the proceedings with alert eyes.

MASSIE IN SOMBRE GARB.

On the other side of Mrs. Fortescue, markedly pale and tense of expression, sat Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, co-defendant and husband of Thalia Massie. Clad in somber-hued civilian clothes, his dark eyes followed every move of the attorneys during their fiery tilts.

FORMER MAYOR BARRY DEAD

J. Edward Barry, former mayor of Cambridge and latterly chairman of the Cambridge election commissioners, died today at his home, 176 Harvard st., in that city.

Ex-Mayor Barry was ill only six days. He suffered an attack of bronchial pneumonia and failed rapidly until death came at 5 a. m. today. His sisters, the Misses Abbie and Katherine G. Barry, were at his bedside.

Mr. Barry served three tegms as mayor of the University City, from April, 1911, to April, 1914. He was known as the "bachelor mayor."

Born in Cambridge September 18, 1874, ex-Mayor Barry was christened John Edward Barry, but was called "Eddie" by his parents, accounting for his use of J. Edward Barry in later life.

Mr. Barry's work in booking the 1908 Democratic delegation to Denver interested him in politics and a few years later he was elected to the old Cambridge common council. He ran for mayor upon the retirement of Mayor Brooks.

Funeral services will be held Thursday morning in St. Mary's church, Norfolk st., Cambridge.

Taken by Death

J. Edward Barry, former mayor of Cambridge, whose death today from pneumonia came as a shock to a community he served for so many years.

NEGLECTED GIRL TO S. P. C. C.

Hazel Johnson, 8, found dazed and bruised in Blue Hill parkway, Milton, Friday night, today was turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Her unwed mother, Miss Evelyn Johnson, 24, of 1A Leyland st., Roxbury, was held in $200 in Roxbury court, charged with neglect of the child.

The girl's grandfather, Robert Johnson, 50, of Leyland st., is on bail of $300 in Quincy court on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident after causing injury to a person.

The girl was in tears as she left City Hospital and bewailed the loss of her hat when she fell from Johnson's automobile Friday night.

Technically charged with "being neglected," she was ordered in the care of the society, by Judge Miles.

She did not see her mother, who was arraigned before Judge Hayden. The latter ordered a hearing April 14.

German Steel for Soviet

Berlin, April 5 (AP)—Financial arrangements have been made to ship 100,000 tons of steel to Soviet Russia on a 21 months' credit at 2 per cent over the Reichsbank rate, it was announced today.

FATHER SAVES BABY IN FIRE

A two-months-old infant was rescued by her father and five persons were driven out today in a fire at 4 Esmond st., Dorchester, that caused damage of $2500.

The baby, Charlotte Alberts, was carried through smoke from the second floor by Max Alberts, who took her to the home of neighbors.

The blaze started in the apartment of Hyman Pruzon on the third floor, from careless smoking, according to Acting District Chief Levis.

Others driven out, mostly because of the dense smoke, were Mr. and Mrs. Harris Katz, Larry Kay, Joseph Nadler and Mrs. Terry Brooke Nadler. Mrs. Nadler married a Boston terrier out.

PRISON FIRE IS SET BY TRUSTY

Joliet, Ill., April 5 (AP)—On old trusty, "tired of being shut up," today set fire to the stone chapel in the state penitentiary. Joliet fire companies and 300 convicts put out the blaze. Damage was estimated at $5000.

Lyman Hall, a convict since 1897 for the murder of a constable and trusty much of the time since 1919, walked into the deputy warden's office and calmly announced:

"I'm tired of the world. I'm tired of being shut up. I just set fire to the chapel and I hope the whole place burns up."

It was a half-hour before the fire department and the prisoners had the flames under control. There was no disorder.

Kills Invalid Wife, Turns Gun on Self

New Canaan, Ct., April 5 (AP)—Nelson A. Philoman, merchant and leader in fraternal and church affairs, shot and killed his wife, who has been confined to her bed for four years, and then committed suicide today.

He, also, had been in ill-health several years.

He was for 20 years superintendent of the Congregational church school, a post he resigned last Sunday, and was secretary and past worthy master of his Odd Fellows lodge, and clerk of the Congregational church.

Police said he rose earlier than usual this morning, walked to his hardware store, got a shotgun and returned to his wife's room, where the shooting occurred.

RUNNERS PLAN BIG SEASON

Halifax, N. S., April 5 (INS)—Rum-runners are planning for a bigger season than ever, despite the threat of augmented coast guard activities.

A fleet of eight vessels already is enroute to Demerara to pick up more than 100,000 gallons of liquor destined to lighten the tax gloom imposed by the United States Congress. Another boat is preparing to leave presently on a similar errand.

All these craft are owned in this province, either in Halifax or nearby ports. They will bring their cargoes back to the local rum row for distribution purposes.

Other craft are scheduled to sail shortly for Saint Pierre, but their cargoes will be taken to the Gaspe coast for distribution. The fleet there reports the liveliest business for several seasons.

SPEAKEASIES IN N. Y. MAPPED

New York, April 5 (AP)—Sixty federal prohibition agents, acting under Director Woodcock and Assistant Administrator Hanson, today began compilation of a "prohibition directory" in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx.

Each agent was provided with a sectional map covering from ten to 20 blocks and instructed to comb carefully the section to make an itemized report on each speakeasy, liquor-serving restaurant, cordial shop and night club.

ARBUCKLE TO WED ACTRESS

Hollywood, April 5 (AP)—The engagement of Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, former film comedian, and Addie McPhail, screen actress, is announced.

They plan to marry "as soon as it is legally possible." Mrs. McPhail's divorce from Lindsay McPhail, song writer, becomes final June 12. Arbuckle's former wife, Doris Deane, recently married Elmer S. Haris, banker, of Beverly Hills.

Man Is Found Dead in Auto at Nashua

Nashua, N. H., April 5 (AP)—Arthur Rohichaud, 37, was found slumped in the seat of a sedan parked on Union st. this morning, dead of a broken neck. Except for a flat tire the car was undamaged.

Police located the owner of the automobile and three men, alleged to have been companions of Robichaud on an automobile ride, and took them for questioning.

Man Kills Himself in Subway Station

Identification was made at the morgue by Charles Havinorne and John J. Hunt, fellow workmen, after a navy yard pass had been found in a coat pocket. Except for Patrick H. Murphy, a Boston fireman, the station was deserted when Adams went to the north end of the platform, placed a revolver in his mouth and fired.

Zep Off Again on Flight to Brazil

Friederichshafen, Germany, April 5 (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin took off at 6:32 a. m. today on her second non-stop flight of the year to Pernambuco, Brazil, following a 25-hour delay caused by damage to the hull.

One Dead, 18 Ill in Topsfield From Milk

One death and 18 cases of septic sore throat have been caused by raw milk produced in Topsfield, according to a report made today by Dr. George H. Bigelow, commissioner of public health.

The owner of the diseased cow died, the report stated, and a hired man working on the farm showed symptoms of the disease.

Owney Madden Beats Law's Drive

New York, April 5 (AP)—Owney Madden, called a Broadway racket boss, has beaten a drive to put him back in Sing Sing, but the state plans an appeal.

Supreme Court Justice Levy held Madden was not a parole violator and hit the state's plan that common gossip branded Madden as a beer racketeer.

DAWES' COUSIN WEDS BRITISHER

Evanston, Ill., April 5 (AP)—On today's calendar was scheduled an indirect but romantic result of the Dawes reconstruction plan—the wedding of Miss Frances Bosworth, cousin of former Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, and Dr. Trevor Stamp, son of Sir Josiah Stamp, one of the world's outstanding economists.

The former ambassador to Great Britain and the groom's father became close friends while working on the world's post-war financial problems. Or a visit to his country last spring the economist met Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bosworth and their daughter.

Later Miss Bosworth went to London to visit her sister, Mrs. Gordon Padley, and there met Dr. Stamp.

The wedding plans were described by the bride as "almost a family affair," for nearly everyone in the wedding party is a Dawes or a Bosworth.

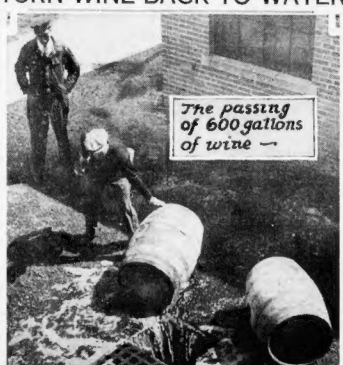
The young couple will live in London.

Farm Board Stocks 'Threat to Prices'

Washington, April 5 (AP)—The director of the American Cotton Shippers' Association today told a Senate committee that the Farm Board wheat and cotton stocks were a continual threat to prices.

The witness, J. M. Locke of Ills by Senator Gore (D., Okla.) which provide that the board cannot dispose of any of its wheat and cotton stocks prior to Jan. 1, 1933.

TURN WINE BACK TO WATER



Quincy police did a bit of miracle performing of their own today—they turned wine back to water by the simple process of turning 600 gallons of the sparkling liquid into the sewer. The wine was seized during recent months. Hard liquor seized was turned over to the State. Lieut. Whalen was in charge of the pouring and Patrolman Adams used the sledge hammer. (Staff photo.)

BANKER HALE IS DENIED APPEAL

Concord, N. H., April 5—The Supreme Court today denied a rehearing of the appeal of Arthur H. Hale, ex-treasurer of the wrecked Merrimack River Savings Bank, from conviction in 48 counts of misuse of bank funds totalling more than $3,000,000.

No further attempt will be made to stay sentence. A maximum sentence would be 480 years. Oscar L. Young, special prosecutor, said he would ask for sentence on one count only.

HERO? BUNK! IT'S PANTS

Here's a Snowshoe Shod Mule

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 5—Nix on the hero stuff. Policeman Joseph Rychowski wants a new pair of pants. He captured a runaway balloon after dashing 12 blocks clinging to a dangling rope. Once or twice during the chase he sat down, and that was hard on the trousers.

HIGH SHOES LOW.

Karachi, India, April 5—Shoes two bits a pair! American factories, disposing of surplus stocks 10 years old, have provided tons of footwear for ladies here. Most of them have high tops—the shoes.

SNOWSHOE-SHOD MULE.

LADIES IN PANTS.

Zakopane, Poland, April 5—The sports mode is gaining concessions from the clergy. Some churches at winter resorts now admit women wearing ski-trousers. Others expel them, though.

PAGE ONE-LEGGERS

Chicago, April 5—Unless the thieves who looted David Lipschutz's automobile can find 250 one-legged men, they will be out of luck, and they must have lost their left legs.

Each of the 250 shoes they stole is for the right foot only.

Lipschutz is a shoe salesman.

Search for Byers' Will Proves Futile

Pittsburgh, April 5 (AP)—The Sun-Telegraph says it learned today a search has been made without success for the will of Eban M. Byers, prominent business man and former amateur golf champion, who died last week in New York of radium poison.

422,578 Given Jobs in National Drive

New York, April 5 (AP)—Daily the "war against depression" campaign for a million jobs for the jobless advanced toward its goal. Yesterday 28 states contributed 10,162 jobs, bringing the total to 422,578. New York state took the lead with a total of 35,736.

MAJ. SCHOEFFEL CLOSETED WITH SCOTLAND YARD

London, April 5 (INS)—Major Charles H. Schoeffel of the New Jersey state police, in London following a lead on the Lindbergh kidnaping, visited Scotland Yard this afternoon.

He conferred for more than an hour with officials of Britain's great criminal investigation bureau, but the outcome of the meeting was not announced.

Previously he had played a game of hide and seek with London reporters.

The major was finally cornered by newspapermen after a wild chase, but he stoutly refused to discuss his mission to London except to admit it was in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping.

"Why can't you leave me alone?" Schoeffel demanded when reporters cornered him after a flight from his hotel.

"I'm sorry, but I can't tell you what I am doing here, but I am in close touch with Scotland Yard and my movements must be kept as secret as possible.

"The Lindbergh kidnaping was a terrible thing and we're all anxious to do all we can to clear up the mystery."

Maj. Schoeffel was asked whether he was going to Glasgow to talk to the mother of Betty Gow, the kidnaped baby's nurse.

"I can't answer questions," he said. "Please don't bother me."

Schoeffel left his hotel by a side entrance and jumped into a taxicab. The driver sped away at a fast pace. Quarter of a mile away, Schoeffel stopped the cab, paid off the driver and bolted down a side alley.

International News Service learned that Maj. Schoeffel planned to clean up London business before leaving for Glasgow, where he will investigate several angles of the kidnaping.

Scotland Yard has turned over to him the complete results of its investigation of Betty Gow, nurse to the Lindbergh baby, whose home was in Glasgow and whose mother now resides there.

The News-Chronicle today carried a story of a sensational report which went around yesterday that an infant resembling the Lindbergh child had been smuggled into a northern English port. The paper said police of a midland town declared the men involved were known to have been in New Jersey recently.

President Butler Hits 'Pussyfooter'

New York, April 5 (AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, says he will go to the Republican national convention only as an "unpledged and uninstructed" delegate. He said:

"The candidate who has both the intelligence and the courage to formulate and publicly to state his views will command a respect which will always be denied the trimmer and the pussyfooter."

Air of Optimism at Lindy's, Anne Bearing Up Very Well

Hopewell, N. J., April 5—There are indications that a happy turn to the baffling kidnaping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., aged 21 months, from his home on March 1, is definitely expected at the Lindbergh home.

President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University and his wife called at the Lindbergh home, and the former reported the Lindberghs were in an unusually happy frame of mind.

He did not see Lindbergh, however, who was away on his secret trip.

"She is holding up wonderfully well," Dr. Hibben said, speaking of Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow.

"I found an air of optimism prevailing at the Lindbergh house and otherwise conditions are about the same on the estate."

Explaining he and his wife were good friends of the Lindberghs —he was reported at one time to have offered to act as intermediary between Lindbergh and the kidnapers—he disclosed Mrs. Hibben had taken flowers to Mrs. Lindbergh.

He refused, however, to confirm a report Lindbergh lost a great deal of weight because of anxiety, sleeplessness and constant attempts to find his son, held captive for five weeks by the abductors.

For the first time in weeks lights were seen during the night in the nursery from which the infant was stolen, and which had remained dark when the rest of the house was brilliantly illuminated.

SEARCH WHOLE ISLAND

All Martha's Vineyard not engaged in the checkup of summer camps had its eyes and ears tuned for the sight of a plane or the sound of an airplane motor.

The license number—NC49M—on the cream colored, red-topped high wing monoplane in which Col. Lindbergh and his legal advisor, Col. Henry Breckenridge, made their flight over the island waters yesterday, was observed by many.

The island search was instituted on the initiative of the two state troopers on the island at Oak Bluffs, Frank Geist and Jeremiah Sullivan. All constables and town officers in Oak Bluffs, Vineyard Haven, Gay Head, Edgartown, Chilmark and Tisbury were cooperating.

The island was to be covered in a systematic search from Gay Head to Edgartown, and particular attention was being paid to isolated gunning camps on the ponds.

No such search has yet been started, however, on the four islands in the Elizabeth group, Nantucket and No Man's Land.

A Chilmark farmer, at 2 a. m. today, aroused by the barking of a dob, observed the interchange of signals between the boat and the car and reported them to police.

The tracks of the car, evidently a large machine, were found on the beach near the West Tisbury line not far from former U. S. Senator William M. Butler's estate.

FACES OPEN SEA

The farmer said the boat, showing no lights except the intermittent flashes of a dot and dash code from a blinking of the auto headlights, lay off the beach about a mile. The interchange of signals lasted nearly a half hour when the car backed off the beach up the West Tisbury road and disappeared.

South beach, on the south side of the island, faces the open sea. It is a desolate region, sparsely settled, patrolled by surfmen from the Gay Head coast guard station. Few boats approach it and the terrific surf and undertow cause it to be shunned by small boats.

On Martha's Vineyard itself, interest centered on two other developments. One of these was the continued absence of the flounder dragger, Alva, which was chartered in Chilmark Sunday night and put out to sea with a man answering the description of Curtis.

TRANSFERRED AT SEA

Curtis is believed to have flown with Col. Lindbergh on his first trip to this region Sunday with Col. Henry Breckenridge and Lieut. George Richards, navy pilot.

According to reports he was transferred at sea from the amphibian plane in which the party made the flight to one of the several New York consigiuard boats on secret patrol in the Vineyard Sound region.

The other development was the attempt to trace a man who, a week ago, bought a supply of baby food in Edgartown's only drug store. George Daley, the druggist, reported the incident to police yesterday connecting it with the Lindbergh case for the first time since Col. Lindbergh flew over the island.

The man was a stranger to him, he said, and had a week's growth of beard and he guessed he was off a ship in Edgartown harbor.

All manner of unconfirmed rumors and reports swept Martha's Vineyard and Cuttyhunk in connection with the developments.

The destroyer Macdougal, on patrol off Cuttyhunk, was said to be the mother ship of the searching fleet, and Col. Lindbergh, according to this report, had lunch aboard her Sunday.

The Macdougal, by radio, was reported attempting to make contact with the 28-foot yacht, Sallie or Nellie, for which the Lindbergh party made inquiries on Cuttyhunk Sunday.

Message signed IRA, the Lindbergh radio code signature, were said to be broadcast by the Macdougal at intervals on low wave on no particular station, but asking that "you" fly the American flag over two blue pennants for identification.

NOTE IN STATION

A flurry of excitement swept Hyannis when Thomas Peak, town building custodian, found a note on the floor of the police station, near the office of Chief William H. Pratt. On plain white paper, printed with a pencil, was this message, neither addressed nor signed:

"Charles L. Lindberg look for at Litefoot house Hyanisport."

Its crude construction and misspelling indicated either illiteracy or bogus illiteracy.

Chief Pratt sent Patrolman Daniel Sullivan and a detail to search the Hotel Gables, Millard House and adjoining cottages in Hyannisport, owned by Alexander Lightfoot.

Orland W. Marchand, care taker at the hotel, aided in the search, which had a negative result. Particular interest was aroused because of the name Lightfoot, because of the previous connection with the investigation of Mr. and Mrs. C. Leandro Lightfoot of Franklin Park, N. J.

The New Jersey Lightfoots reported the disappearance of their butler and maid immediately following the kidnaping and they were sought for several days, finally being located, questioned and absolved.

Hubby Burned Her, Says Wife in Suit

Springfield, April 5 (AP)—Testifying in court today in her divorce suit, Mrs. Emily J. Gagnier, 33, said her husband, Charles A. Gagnier, held a lighted match to her arm, saying:

"I want to give you a taste of what hell will be like."

Live Trolley Wire Perils Pedestrians

Several pedestrians narrowly escaped injury at Western ave. and Heffernan st., Brighton, today when 100 feet of trolley wire fell.

It burned a path through a car track and nearly struck several automobiles. Police guarded the wire until an Elevvated repair crew arrived.

FEELING BABY WILL SOON BE RETURNED

Hopewell, N. J., April 5—Out of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's second mysterious plane trip in two days in apparent attempts to recover his kidnaped son today grew a fast spreading belief the return of the infant was imminent.

So persistent was the belief that shortly after Lindbergh and his counselor, Col. Henry Breckinridge returned from a second secret flight, reported over the vicinity of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., a rumor the abducted baby actually was already back with its parents gained rapid headway.

NEGATIVE REPORT

This was officially denied in a somewhat ambiguous statement by Col. Schwarzkopf, state police head, early today.

"No definite nor authentic information concerning the restoration of the baby has been received by police," Schwarzkopf declared.

The "news bulletin" issued at 10 o'clock this morning by Col. Schwarzkopf was of the usual negative character. It read:

"No report has been received at the headquarters indicating that the baby is anywhere in the vicinity of British Honduras and no activities are being carried on in this direction.

"The police have had no contact with the kidnapers and have received no information of any kind about the return of the baby. The activities in Martha's Vineyard have not been requested by these headquarters and are probably an independent investigation by some other department.

"Investigators are out this morning on information received through the mail and further reports on their findings will be given in a further bulletin."

Optimism permeates the big white house on Sourland Mountain as the head of the household comes and goes on mysterious airplane journeys.

SEEKING YACHT HERE

Twice in three days he has soared away, apparently seeking a yacht off the Massachusetts coast. The trips are believed to have come from complained connection with rumors that ransom negotiations are being carried on with kidnapers who took the 21-months-old baby from his crib March 1.

Reports from the three Norfolk intermediaries shortly after they entered into the hunt for the kidnapers were that the baby was known to be held on a boat hidden near some inaccessible coastal islands. No confirmation of this was ever obtained or to whether the place referred to was in Chesapeake Bay or off Massachusetts.

Both figured prominently in connection with the case for some time. Four or five men and a trained nurse were said to hold the baby.

Taking a personal hand in the hunt, Colonel Lindbergh has appealed for freedom from questioning about his movements.

"Col. Lindbergh feels that under existing circumstances he should be privileged to move without the incumbrance of either checkup or accounting," said a police statement.

PLANE IDENTIFIED

Driving his own car, the Flying Colonel slipped into his estate at midnight after his second airplane journey. About 3:30 p. m. yesterday he and Col. Breckinridge climbed over a back fence at Newark airport and sped away in a borrowed plane capable of 180 miles an hour.

Late in the afternoon a plane identified by its number as the craft carrying Lindbergh was seen cruising over Martha's Vineyard. It was in this vicinity also that Col. Lindbergh was reported seen flying Sunday with three other men. Residents of the island said the four had inquired for a small yacht, Sallie.

When Lindbergh and Breckinridge started their flight yesterday, they carried a suitcase and a blanket. Many conjectures arose as to the reason for this but none was verified. They brought back neither the blanket nor the suitcase.

There seemed to be some link between Lindbergh's flights, first to Cuttyhunk Island, in Buzzards Bay, then to Martha's Vineyard, and the activities of John H. Curtis, Norfolk, Va., intermediary, who, when discovering on a secret mission several days ago, was said to have gone to the same neighborhood.

Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock and Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, Curtis' associates in the kidnap negotiations, refused to comment on Lindbergh's flight or its significance. Burrage himself returned yesterday to his home after an unexplained absence of a day.

Added to the excitement of these developments was the statement of a drug store owner in Edgartown, on the eastern tip of Martha's Vineyard.

He said a stranger, apparently from a boat, purchased some baby food at his store a week ago.

MRS. CURTIS IS BACK; DECLINES TO TELL OF TRIP

Norfolk, Va., April 5 (INS)—Mrs. John Hughes Curtis, whose husband is chief of the Norfolk trio seeking recovery of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, returned home this morning after an absence of a week.

She refused to say where she had been or whether or not her trip was in any way connected with negotiations for the return of the child.

She said she had not seen or communicated with her husband since last Saturday, when he left Norfolk allegedly on a mission which concerned the contacting of the kidnapers or their representatives.

She said she did not know his present whereabouts which increased the speculation aroused by his absence and gave impetus to current rumors that he was in New England.

WON'T HAZARD GUESS

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, at the press conference this morning, would contribute nothing new. He refused to answer any questions concerning negotiations nor would he hazard a guess concerning the length of time that would be required to bring the negotiations to a head.

The return of Curtis was awaited here today in an atmosphere charged with excitement.

Admiral Burrage revealed that Curtis was away in connection with negotiations through which he hoped to effect return of the stolen infant.

And soon after Curtis left, reports of mysterious absences from home on the part of Col. Lindbergh were received.

Simultaneously movements of the two gave rise to a mass of speculation placing them together, and neither Burrage nor the third of the Norfolk trio, Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, rector of Christ's Episcopal Church, would say anything to disparage such a theory.

Rev. Mr. Dobson-Peacock, after hearing of a mysterious trip by Col. Lindbergh, and knowing of the absence of Curtis, said "important developments" portended.

Burrage was something of a mystery himself over the week-end and did not dispel this when after a disappearance of 24 hours he refused to discuss his absence.

He turned up yesterday when everyone, including Rev. Dodson-Peacock, believed he was out of the city and calmly asked why the usual daily list of questions which have been sent up to him in writing two hours before conferences were not prepared.

He would not deny that he was absent from Norfolk Sunday, however, and observed he "got some sleep" Monday afternoon.

The feeling that Curtis' return would clarify at least some of the nebulous points of the negotiations was stronger than ever today. Neither Burrage nor the Rev. Dodson-Peacock would predict when Curtis would return, and his mother, Mrs. George H. Curtis, who is caring for his two youngsters, Constance and Joan, said she did not know.

Mrs. Curtis, who was sent to a secret location to serve as a communications medium between all parties interested in the negotiations, has not turned up either, and no information was available as to her whereabouts or possible return.

Baby's Description Never Sent Here

Police Supt. Crowley today criticized New Jersey authorities because they have never sent to Boston any description of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby or any circulars printed in connection with the search. "Of course they may have some reason for not notifying Boston, but, for the life of me, I can't understand it," he said.

The only description he has he gained from the newspapers, he said.

LY TO LAUNCH SMITH DRIVE ON RADIO

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

While Governor Ely will fire the pot gun in the Smith campaign tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock over the radio from Station WBZ, no plans have yet been formulated for any immediate follow-up of that address.

A decision has yet to be reached, Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the state committee revealed, as to the necessity of establishing a Smith headquarters. Indications are that a sustained public speaking program will not be put in operation by the Walsh-Ely-Donahue combination until the last ten days of the contest.

RALLIES TONIGHT

Spurred by the success of the rally held at the women's headquarters in the Hotel Touraine Sunday night, the Roosevelt forces will repeat tonight with movie and stage stars furnishing the entertainment. Among those announced to appear is Pola Negri.

Roosevelt rallies will also be held in Peabody City Hall, Hibernian Hall and Now and Then Hall, Salem; and Odd Fellows Hall, Lynn. Speakers will include Mayor Curley, James Roosevelt, Governor's Councilor James H. Brennan, Edward A. McLaughlin, Jr., Joseph H. Hanken, Paul Hines, and local district delegate candidates on the Roosevelt slate.

In his first invasion of the western part of the state, Mayor Curley was vigorously applauded by a big audience in the Springfield Auditorium.

TELLS OF SPLIT

The mayor told of his efforts to prevent the split between the Smith and Roosevelt groups and repeated that Smith is not a candidate.

The only purpose, he contended, of putting the Smith name on the ballot was to "increase the political power of Boss Donahue."

"If through the expression of sentiment or good will for Alfred E. Smith we weaken or jeopardize in any measure the chances for success of the outstanding Democrat in America," he warned, "we not only do an injustice to our fellow Americans, but a gross injustice to one of the most courageous, able and loveable public officials with which this country of ours has been blessed during its entire history, Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York."

ASHES HOOVER

Training his heavy artillery on President Hoover and former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, the Mayor said:

"The myth of the great engineer and the great treasurer have long been exploded, and from a country of unparalleled prosperity we have become a land where the struggle for mere existence is the problem of everyone."

"Provision has been made, it is true, to provide money for the financiers responsible for our present plight, and likewise for the railroads, but no money has been forthcoming to provide work and wages for the unemployed and needy, which, after all, is the only panacea for unemployment," he said.

HERE'S NEW 'GARNER BOB'

Dedicated to Speaker John N. Garner because "its simplicity is an expression of the simplicity of the man himself," this new style of hair-dressing promises to become a sensation among the ladies. It is the creation of Percy Westmore, and Miss Bette Davis is the model. Mr. Westmore, a New York hairdresser, describes his creation as "of medium length hair, with low parting, no wave at all on top of the head, and with a simple shadow wave and loose ringlets on sides and back." OPEN TRIAL OF 14-YEAR-OLD DEATH CASE

New Bedford, April 5 (AP)—The grim details of a murder committed 14 years ago were revived today at the trial of William C. Brown, former soldier, textile worker and globe wanderer.

Brown is accused of killing his bride of a week on July 6, 1918, and Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank E. Smith told the jury the state would produce at least one witness to whom Brown made known his intentions of disposing of his wife.

MAGRATH CALLED

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Suffolk county medical examiner, called as the state's first witness, gave detailed medical testimony regarding evidence surrendered by the Taunton river—fragments of the victim's body. He told the jury a bread knife and a hack saw had been used and that not enough of the body was recovered for him to say definitely that the bride had been strangled.

Brown married Annie Donovan, 21-year-old Fall River girl, on June 29, 1918, shortly after they had returned from working in a Peterboro, N. H., mill and at the behest of the girl's parents, the state claims.

BROWN VANISHED

On the 20th of July, Brown disappeared and no trace was found of him until last August. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American War, and of the Phillipine Insurrection, and it was through an application for a disability allowance that he was found, a patient at the Soldier's Home at Johnson City, Tenn.

Ice Cream Pioneer in China Is Facing Opium Charges

Shanghai, April 5 (AP)—Paul Crawley, "the man who introduced ice cream into China," will go on trial in the United States court April 12 on a charge of exporting opium aboard the U. S. naval transport Chaumont.

He pleaded not guilty when arraigned today and was released on $10,000 bail.

Crawley, who once controlled the ice cream business here, is now a slot machine operator. He was arrested Jan. 9, following seizure at San Francisco of 55 tins of raw opium valued at $3000. He is well known throughout China for his spectacular promotional exploits.

Ten years ago he brought an American Indian here and exhibited him.

Trial of Warren Sloat ati "Red" Fosberg, alleged confederates of Crawley, who were arrested at San Francisco, is being delayed pending the outcome of Crawy's trial here.

20 ARE INJURED IN MINE RIOT

Zanesville, O., April 5 (INS)—Hurling stones, clubs and wrenches in a surprise invasion of the Zanesville coal field, hundreds of alleged strike pickets from southern and eastern Ohio attacked a crowd of miners at the Philo mine of the Muskingum Coal Co.

Thirty were reported injured. One man was probably fatally wounded and two others were taken to a hospital.

Harry Paul, 43, brother of Ralph Paul, superintendent of the mine, suffered a crushed skull when he and other miners attempted to rush through the blockade of alleged strikers in an automobile caravan.

GARNER GAINS IN CALIFORNIA

San Francisco, Cal., April 5—Shattering records of many years' standing, state registration of voters for the state presidential primary election on May 3 continued today to amaze politicians because of the shift of voters by parties.

The swing to the Democrats has been pronounced, especially in centers that, four years ago, gave Hoover 240,000 plurality.

Henry H. McPike, director of the Garner-for-President organization, said:

"In sections where the rank and file have predominantly signified their support of Speaker Garner, there has been a marked change in party registration.

"In President Hoover's home county, Santa Clara, there is a marked gain of Democratic voters and a heavy decrease of Republican registration."

Germany's Budget Drops Reparations

Berlin, April 5 (AP)—For the first time since the close of the World War the German budget for the fiscal year 1932-33, which is in the course of preparation, makes no provision for reparations payments.

The government is making an effort to balance national accounts at about $2,040,000,000.

WANTS U. S. BUY MT. VERNON

Washington, April 5 (AP)—A resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to determine the terms and conditions by which the Federal Government might purchase Mount Vernon was approved today by the house lands committee.

Under the resolution, the secretary would confer with the officers of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, which now owns Washington's old home, and ascertain on what terms they would sell the property to the government.

Representative Treadway (R., Mass.) author of the Mount Vernon bill, pronounced private ownership of the greatest national shrine "incongruous," now that a new $5,000,000 Federal highway goes to its doors.

Tardieu Back Home After Conference

Paris, April 5 (AP)—Premier Andre Tardieu returned today from London, where he conferred with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald over preliminaries to the four-power conference which meets there tomorrow to discuss financial relief for the countries of the Danube, as well as general European problems.

Prof. Ostwald Dead

Leipzig, Germany, April 5 (US)—Prof. Wilhelm Ostwald, 79, first German professor to lecture at Harvard University, is dead here.

2 STATES VOTE ON DELEGATES

Washington, April 5 (US)—New York and Wisconsin held the center of the political stage today as voters went to the polls to pick delegates.

President Hoover is virtually assured of getting the Empire State's bloc of 97 votes on the Republican side, there being no opposition in the primary.

New York is entitled to 94 votes in the Democratic convention. The voters today will choose only the district delegates, with the delegates-at-large to be chosen at the State convention later.

In Wisconsin, a Roosevelt slate is opposed in the primary to an unpledged group, generally believed favorable to Al Smith.

WENT THE ROUNDS SATURDAY NIGHT . . . THERE was a birthday in the family and what is more fun than to celebrate with a night in town.

KATHERINE DAVIS

First we dined at a fascinating poke-about Russian place with startling pictures painted on the walls . . . long-bearded gentlemen in toques and tunics, shy little peasant girls in full skirts and amusing headdress . . . snow-scenes, blue lights . . . pottery dishes . . . you know, that bizarre atmosphere that makes you feel arty and languorous.

After a delicious dinner, we attended a popular show . . . "If Booth Had Missed" . . . You remember, we told you we had met him at a luncheon last week . . . the author, Mr. Arthur Goodman. It was a remarkable play, so absorbing that we have ordered A Life of Lincoln from our bookseller this morning to know more about it.

We marched out of the theater singing "Dixie" and other popular airs of the 1860's . . . and everyone looked at our gay little party and perhaps thought we were . . . that way . . . but we weren't . . . we were just happy that Abraham Lincoln was our national hero.

With so much cheering we found our crowd hungry and thirsty . . . so off again to The Seaglades for a cozy bite and a dance to Mickey's Mariners' mooching music. We adore the entrance to night clubs, this one in particular . . . dim and mysterious . . . the gayly colored posters making it feel real foreign and Bohemian.

Handsome Officers Bid You Welcome

EVERYONE IS ALWAYS SO FRIENDLY . . . A NICE sailor-feller salutes and says "Good Evening" as though he knew you. Handsome officers appear out of the shadows to bid you welcome . . . and how they can distinquish whether we are Betty Alden or the soul of a sailor is a miracle.

THEY HAD A WONDERFUL floor show Saturday night . . . two wizards who tapped until we were almost exhausted just to follow them . . . you can imagine how fast they must have been . . . Menard and Draper.

MICKEY ALPERT SANG HIS song . . . later, the big baritone rendered . . . that is the way he does his stuff . . . one of our old favorites . . . Chloe. He really is a good crooner . . . and if he reads that he will probably get mad and bite one of the little fishes what swim around in those cozy, woozy glass bowls.

Superb Dancers

FRESH FROM THE NEW MOON, that superb dancing pair, Cortez and Peggy, twirled and swirled until we were dizzy . . . and we only had ginger-ale. Have we mentioned that the place was crowded to the hatches, but the lights being as dim as at the bottom of the sea, we really can't tell you who was present . . . perhaps we wouldn't anyway, because we don't always tell all that we see.

THINKING OF THE SEA reminds us that we hear those charmers who took a house in Bermuda a couple of weeks ago to entertain the Harvard boys when they arrived are having a WHALE of a time. This peppy group included Sister Hovey, Kitty Talbot, Katherine Davis, Betty Thomas and Elsie Brewer. When Johnny comes sailing home . . . we will tell you about it.

THERE ARE A COUPLE OF engagements in the air. Betty Kendall of Marlborough st. and Evelyn Hollingsworth of Hyde Park are the luckies, if rumor is true. Betty was receiving congratulations at church on Easter Sunday and we heard from the Mason-Russell household that Evelyn is looking suspiciously happy.

Elizabeth Kendall

NEXT TUESDAY WE HEAR that Eliot Putnam, the attractive father of the attractive son, Eliot, Jr., who coaches football at Noble and Greenough, is giving a talk on "Ancient and Modern Art" in Milton. We predict that within a few years everyone will "go intellectual" . . . and money will be a burden . . . maybe there won't be any, the French will have it all.

For Smart Set

DID YOU KNOW THAT THE Brittany Coffee Shop is the rendezvous for the smart set on Sunday nights? That intriguing little French eating place out the more-married group for a fashionable dinner-supper . . . we should say the French name for it . . . and the price is unbelievable. You know what the cuisine is . . . if you don't, where have you been all your life.

A CERTAIN SMART MATRON told us that last week was her husband's birthday . . . he's terribly attached to her and intended to have a party, but was just too lazy to arrange it . . . so . . . she asked the Brittany Coffee Shop to help her out . . . and really, she said it was the most successful party she ever gave. Forty people and the price . . . ? Well, we can't see how the Household Nursing Association got a cent . . . but they must have, because that is WHY the Brittany Coffee Shop.

LEADERS TO SPONSOR CONCERT

More Names on Patroness Rolls

More patronesses have been added to the long list of subscribers for the Folk Music Concert to be held at the Lee Auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. Friday evening at 8:30 and on Saturday morning at 10:30. The artists are to be Ljubljana and Schubelj, who will give a program of Jugoslav songs and dances in national costumes.

Junior League girls who will usher Friday evening, directed by Miss Eleanor Collier, include the Misses Lydia Evans, Jane Megrew, Eleanor Stephenson, Gretchen Thompson, Rebecca Benson, Margaret Hinckley and Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson, Jr.

The flower girls, also Junior League members, will wear lovely costumes from Jugoslavia, and among these girls are Miss Virginia McNeil, Miss Eleanor Rowe, Miss Elizabeth Dwinnell and Miss Elizabeth Harding.

Miss Rosamond Holton has charge of the ushers for the Saturday morning performance and the girls ushering on that morning are the Misses Anne Houghton, Nell Todd Baldwin, Priscilla Simonds, Katrina Hartt, Eleanor Fabyan and Barbara Heywood.

Added to the long list of patronesses previously announced are Mrs. Richard Cabot, Mrs. Royal G. Whiting, Mrs. William L. Garrison, Jr., Mrs. Farwell G. Remis, Mrs. Manning Emery, Jr., Mrs. Robert E. Anderson, Mrs. Edward L. Moreland, Mrs. Dexter Thurber, Mrs. Charles Allen Porter, Mrs. William H. Robey, Mrs. Edwin Pratt Holmes, Mrs. William Ellery, Mrs. Walter M. Evatt, Mrs. Robert Hallowell, Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mrs. Joseph B. Ely, wife of Governor Ely, is another one lending her name in sponsorship.

Clothes Go Up in Flames

Clothes which had been hung out to dry by Mrs. Marie Butters were destroyed yesterday when a fire burned the rear piazza at 357 East Cottage st., Dorchester.

GIGANTIC DRIVE FOR BUSINESS BY COCA-COLA

Carl Dreyfus, regional supervisor of Hearst newspapers in Boston, was one of the principal speakers at a meeting of Coca-Cola executives and 1500 retail druggists and confectionery dealers at the Hotel Statler last night.

The druggists and confectionery dealers, who were guests of the Coca-Cola company, were told that an intensive newspaper advertising campaign in the interest of "the pause that refreshes" will be conducted in Boston and 18 adjacent cities throughout the spring and summer months.

PROMOTION OF BUSINESS

Announcement of this advertising plan came from R. Neal Harris, vice-president of the eastern region of the Coca-Cola company, who was introduced to the gathering by Mr. Dreyfus.

"We have been particularly interested in inviting you to this meeting because it deals with business promotion—a question in which we are all mutually and vitally interested," Mr. Dreyfus said.

"In this market the manufacturers, the Coca-Cola Company, is making a most substantial investment for the promotion of business, reflecting confidence in the sales potentialities of this territory that is gratifying to those concerned in the promotion of business in the Boston market."

GREATEST CAMPAIGN

Mr. Harris asserted that the advertising campaign to be launched this week "is the largest ever undertaken by any concern marketing a beverage," and that "newspaper advertising is one of the best and most productive forms of creating good will for any product which it is possible to find."

The Coca-Cola's 1932 advertising campaign, he said, is designed not only to increase consumer demand but to promote the good will already existing between the soda fountain operators and the Coca-Cola Company.

An especially prepared motion picture, "Speaking of Profit," designed to assist in solving retail drug business problems, was shown.

The proceeds will be used for Camp Wadsworth, which is the summer camp in Sharon of the Ellis Memorial, enabling children to go away for two weeks or more during the summer months. A great many of these children's mothers and fathers are unemployed.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

There is a beautiful strip of land in the East River which in the old days used to be called Blackwell's Island, since a family of that name dwelt there. It must have been wonderful to live in the ancient mansion and watch the ships sail by, to see the constantly changing currents of Little Hell Gate, and to look over at the picturesque old Gracie mansion, set in its farmlands. There were no bridges then over the river. To reach New York one had to take a rowboat or a temperamental ferry that ran when it pleased, with little sympathy for the impatience of travelers.

If Yeats's Lake Isle of Innesfree proved a refuge for the poet, so Blackwell's Island must have been loved by the family who lived there, so close to the growing city, yet really so far away from it. But the time came when they had to vacate; for it was decided that this segregated area would be an ideal place for the city prison, for the poor-house, and for various hospitals.

When Queensboro Bridge was built, and hung almost over the center of the island communication with New York by water was practically discontinued; for it was easy to transport both patients and prisoners by means of an elevator from that highway of the air, and dispose of them in the same way. Visitors reach the island in this manner now and all the supplies get to the various buildings in short order.

Only from our city's waterfront or from Queensboro Bridge had I ever seen Welfare Island, as it is known. But through the kindness of Chaplain Ussher I was permitted to go there the other day, when the wind was making the blue waves curl on the river and there was a hint of spring in the crisp air.

I had heard how, long ago, there had been huge rats on this island, and vermin in the prison cells. But now, there is a colony as clean as Spotless Town, with little curving waves, five chapels, shrubs and plants and flowers, immaculate kitchens, beds and mattresses and springs for the poor and the sick and those in cells; a community room where motion-pictures are shown two nights a week; a colony, in short, that exists like a small city of 10,000 inhabitants, wherein everything runs on oiled wheels.

Over here the great warm, friendly arm of our city stretches out and enfolds and shields the stricken ones who need a home. I saw old men, well nourished, with peace on their tired faces. I saw the lame and bali making Indian baskets, or quietly listening to the radio, and I saw one man, depleted of all his worldly goods, reunited to be here, safe in the assurance that his days would run by in peace, now that he had found his refuge.

In one ward of the women's hospital not long ago there were no less than a hundred and four children brought into the world within 24 hours. Many of these mothers were women of refinement. Their husbands being out of work, they had been forced to come here; but the treatment they received was equal to that given in any of our well-organized hospitals elsewhere.

If you think of New York merely as an iron monster, devoid of pity in its agate heart, you should feel the vibrations of kindness and solicitude that pour out here. Trays of the most delicate food are placed before these people; and back of all the complex machinery of care one senses a spirit of tenderness and kindness. There are churches for Catholics, Protestants and Jews; and there are reading-rooms with all the current magazines and books. (And by the way, if you have any volumes, send them to the Rev. Sidney N. Ussher, who will distribute them.)

In the prison, some birds were building their nests in the eaves when we went in, and the whole wide corridor was flooded with light from the glass ceiling. The windows, though barred, were wide open, so that those confined had a view of the river and the great city beyond, and the walls of every cell were brightly painted. Many men are put to work on the roads, and there are baseball games at certain hours. There is a special ward for those who arrive worn down by drugs; and there are masseurs who give treatments to those requiring them. There is an X-ray room, and major operations are performed almost daily.

Breakfast: Rolled oats, bread and butter, coffee.

Supper: Creamed potatoes, apricots, bread and butter and tea.

No great hotel contains better and cleaner kitchens.

I looked over all my city as I came away and it seemed to me that I heard its great heart beating, and I felt that its gentle hands was resting on the tired heads of these stricken folk. I was never quite so proud of New York.

-Yet she wears underthings a second day

FRESH AS A ROSE, she steps from her tub and then—too often she puts on lingerie stale with yesterday's perspiration!

And, of course, she perspires again today. Everyone does, at least a little. All too soon other people get that penetrating hint.

Don't risk offending in this way! Lux takes away acids and odors completely—yet so gently that it cannot harm the finest fabric or the daintiest color. Lux underthings and stockings after every wearing. This dainty habit takes only 4 minutes or less!

Wash this 4-minute way!

Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali which weakens threads, fades colors. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

LUX In the Dishpan

Lux keeps your hands soft and smooth. Use it for washing dishes. It costs so little!

All Need Vegetables in the Springtime

Spring Tonics in Vegetables for You

Spring used to mean days of sour and molasses and flagging appetites, but the modern physician is much more apt to prescribe a tonic of fresh vegetables—two generous servings of non-starchy vegetables, such as carrots, lettuce, string beans, cabbage, etc., a day, together with one starchy vegetable, such as potato, and a raw vegetable thrown in for good measure.

Perhaps that sounds like a powerful lot of vegetables to you, but Mr. Doctor reminds us that vegetables are most valuable for the bulk, mineral salts, vitamins and water which they supply our body.

NEW METHODS

But all too often the careless preparation of vegetables is responsible for the unappetizing results that the family turns their noses up at. The old-fashioned cook books, in giving directions for vegetables, used to direct you to "cover with water and boil until tender." Which usually meant that the valuable vegetable water was drained into the sink, carrying with it much of the fine flavor and mineral salt so necessary to h healthful diet.

The wise housekeeper today cooks her vegetables either in a minimum amount of water, in a steamer, in a waterless cooker or in the oven. In using a minimum amount of water you need a heavy kettle with a tight-fitting cover. Prepare the vegetables as usual, place them in the utensil, add about ¼ cup of water, cover and place over a high heat. When the steam begins to rise, lower the heat and cook until the vegetables are tender.

For cabbage, cauliflower and Brussels sprouts you'll need at least one cup of water. Don't test the vegetables until you think they are nearly tender because each time the cover is removed, steam escapes and moisture is lost.

SHOULD STUDY VEGETABLES

It's well worth while to really make a study of vegetables and the many delicious and unusual ways they can be cooked—shredding string beans lengthwise with a sharp knife and serving with a little cream or tomato sauce makes a big difference. Peas a la King, or with an orange sauce are distinctively different, and so is cabbage with tomato sauce. Even fried cauliflower, creamed celery with green peppers, or fried celery, scalloped onions and peas are a good combination, and if you haven't tried parsnip croquettes, you've missed something luscious. And the preparation of potatoes is a study in itself.

We've illustrated two favorites for you today—panbroiled mushrooms and fried tomato slices. With one cup of cream soup, a hot roll, and a clear cup of tea, here's a luncheon for a queen.

Mushrooms, praise be, are non-fattening, and tomatoes, we know, are especially good for the would-be slim. So, let's fall to, with gusto.

MUSHROOM RECIPE

Slice the tomatoes crosswise, and p them in a plate of fine cracker bread crumbs. Melt a generous amount of butter in a heavy frying an, lay the tomato slices in and y them quickly, turning them as oon as they are brown on one ide. Quick-frying will prevent heir getting soft and unmanageble.

To panbroil the mushrooms, remove the caps, peel them if they are at all tough, place them in a hot pan with melted butter, allowing 4 tbsps. of butter to a pound of large mushrooms. Cook them for about 5 minutes over moderate heat, keeping them closely covered. They are then ready to serve on toast, with or without a cream sauce, made with the fat and liquid left in the pan.

FRESH VEGETABLES FOR SPRING TONIC

Modern doctors are far more apt to prescribe three or four fresh vegetables to overcome "that tired feeling" than the sulphur and molasses of grandma's days. These panboiled mushrooms and tomatoes make agreeable spring medicine.

Better Teeth for King Baby

What a wonderful thing for the parents of a new baby to know that the child can be assured, through proper diet, of a sound, lasting set of teeth.

Dental cavities can be prevented, arrested, and I'm told, possibly even filled in by selection of those foods that give the child its quota of calcium phosphorus and vitamins C and D.

As the set of 20 "baby" teeth are formed and fully enameled before birth, it is obvious that the expectant mother's diet must be provided with these same elements if the baby's jaw bones are to be fully developed, and if the teeth are to come in straight and even and are to be of full size and well enameled.

Cod liver oil is rich in vitamin D, but there are plenty of delicious foods that will furnish an abundance of one or another of all the vitamins. Milk is the best source of calcium and phosphorus. For A: Milk, spinach, carrots and eggs. For C: Oranges, lemons, tomatoes and raw cabbage. But, remember that heat or exposure to air destroys the vitamin. For D: Take your choice of daily sun baths, ultra-violet lamp treatments, doses of cod liver oil or viosterol, or one to two slices of vitamin D white or whole wheat bread per meal.

Frosted Foods' Birthday

This week, I'm reminded, is the first anniversary of the frosted foods that we use so frequently in the Martha Lee Cooking School.

The frosted foods folk invite you all to join in their first anniversary celebration by offering you three birthday specials for just one week. These are their rib roasts, lamb chops and raspberries. If you read the Marketing Column carefully, you'll find attractive prices given there.

A 4½ lb. frosted rib roast means 4½ pounds of clear meat, which, I'm told, means that 2¾ pounds of bone and fat have been removed.

The lamb chops, in sanitary one-pound packages, are of uniform thickness, four chops to the pound, trimmed of excess bone and fat. And the luscious red raspberries have all the delicate flavor and appearance of fresh-picked fruit. Every berry in the box is perfect. I'd like awfully much to send you some extra good recipes for using them. May I?

MILLIONS HELPED TO HEALTH BY ALL-BRAN

Has "Bulk" and Vitamin B for Constipation; Also Iron for Blood

In ten years, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has gained an increasing number of friends. Today, it is used by millions with satisfactory results.

New tests show added reasons for the success of ALL-BRAN. Laboratory experiments prove it has "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

Another benefit of ALL-BRAN is that it has twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

The headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so often result from constipation can be overcome by this pleasant cereal. How much better than using habit-forming pills and drugs.

ALL-BRAN action is gentle. Its "bulk" is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal, or use in cooking. Tempting recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Wedlocked Foods Live in Harmony

"Just made for each other" are certain foods, which live in harmony that surpasses even that of the barber shop quartet. What can you add to this list of perfect culinary partners? Dust and Oranges; Camembert Cheese and Fresh Pears; Dates and Crisp Salted Nuts; Grapefruit and Calavos; Gingerbread and Cottage Cheese; Sausage and Tart Apples (sauted); Cream Cheese and Dates.

A Tasty Two-in-One Cocktail for You

A two-in-one cocktail worth bragging about is made of equal parts of clam juice (canned clam bouillon will do nicely) and tomato juice. Season to taste with salt, pepper and a wee bit of horseradish. Shake and pour over crushed ice in small glasses. It's a snappy way to start a dinner, or excellent to serve any time with little puff paste crackers spread with anchovy paste.

THE BRIDGE BUTLER

IS NEW, efficient and tidy. Dainty tray, regulation bridge size, fits snugly over the top of your bridge table. Set it in the kitchen with your bridge refreshments. Serve without confusion. Marks you as an up-to-date hostess. $2.95 in green, red or black enamel.

IN THE SAME SHOP attractive tables, with real imported Spanish tile tops, for $1. 21" high. Good looking, practical.

TOASTED SANDWICHES are the answer to the Sunday supper problem. And it's a joy to toast them if you own an electric sandwich toaster. I paid $10 for mine—and now they're just $1.25. Adjustable to single or double deck sandwiches, muffins, toast, etc.

SIMPLEST ARITHMETIC shows a 4½ pound roast of quick-frosted beef weighed 7¾ pounds before rolled and boned. 39c a pound this week to celebrate the first birthday of these famous frosted foods. Luscious lamb chops, 4 to a pound, 31c, and a box of the best ever raspberries, for 27c.

PRUNE PLUMS are no relation to the dried kind. Fat, luscious, fresh prunes are ripened on trees, then canned in rich, purple syrup just like peaches or pears. Mighty reasonable at 20c for a big tin.

AT THE NEXT COUNTER, the first maple sugar of the season. Light colored, pure, delicately flavored. Fresh every day from Vermont. Cake of four large cakes—(14 oz.) 55c.

IT'S SMART TO BE THRIFTY! Save fuel using a portable oven on one burner of your gas or oil stove. Complete with rack, cover and protection plate for the burner, $1.25. Roasts, bakes, toasts to perfection. Wonderful for baking baby's noon potato or breakfast biscuits.

DOUBLE ACTION household ammonia, unexcelled for laundry uses and all cleansing purposes, 43c a half gallon jug. Add some to the water in which you wash brushes, glassware, windows, and watch it coax the dirt right out.

A THOUSAND THANKS for the letters you've sent me saying you use and like this column. I'll be looking with all four eyes for more finds next week. Meanwhile, this column, clipped and checked and sent to me with your complete name and address, will receive a prompt reply.

Faithfully yours,

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Fortune's Prank:
love my ladies willow-slim—
My ladies! Hear me talk—
When for a job (poor, hapless dob!)
I walk and walk and walk.

My stomach slaps my spinal cord—
I am so thin and weak.
Ladies for me! What fantasy
Coined by a workless sleek!

I've always loved slim ladies, though,
Since I was just a brat.
Yet though it's bare in our Frigidaire,
Gods! But my wife is fat!
—The Sad Funny Man.

Hashovers:

Newspaper people have been soothing home-made cupcakes of the newly married Mrs. Guy Athorne (ex-Bob sister Corinne Danforth) . . . Those cakes are quite all right, from what we hear . . . Our very best "thank you" to Frank Smith for the tickets for the Harry DeGlane-Ed Don George match at the Arena this Thursday . . . We'll be there—and like a lot of other women, especially if stunning Sam Smith is to be refereed . . . Since it's for the City of Boston Welfare Fund, how about capacity that night, fans? . . . We heard a Charles River country clubber make him wish the other day, as he bought a new golf outfit and started shelling out the bills, "And to think I was a Scotchman invented this game!"

Sad to Relate

Vincent Lopez, while he has charm for us personally, has little or no charm for us as a contributor . . . At least, we were no whit charmed when he penned to us from Detroit that he had "no scandal" . . . Hans Wagner and Otto Aschermann danced with greater zest at the Egyptian Room Saturday night because they had just taken out their first citizenship papers . . . Bermuda's Elbow Beaches are getting daily thrills from the bathing-suit gamboling of Boston's pretty ones, Alice Hebern and Alys Cole . . . Joe Bolton, back in town after a winter among Miami's palms and depression, is having a big night Sunday for his pronunciation - distorting brother Benny and Jack Hailey . . . Anna May Wong, Chinese cinema actress, has traveled in many countries—but has never set foot in China . . . And she never has those lengthy fingernails red because, dear ladies, she thinks it's "vulgar" . . . Of course we think Tony Shakespearian Wons is wonderful—oh, surely . . . But we must state the facts . . . So here's one . . . A young miss, just leaving the Keith-Boston, paused before a photograph of Tony Wons and soliloquized quite loudly, "Tony—if I were the only girl in the world, and you were the only boy—I still wouldn't like you" . . .

Tribute

On its "night off," the Mayfair had its guest crowd in the mood. Occasion: a testimonial to Jacques Renard arranged by Frank Rice, Jack Fay and Benny Goldberg (three well-known song-publishers' representatives), and with Charlie Wolfe and Jacques Roberts much in evidence to see that the tributing remained at white tribute-heat at all times . . . George "Grin God" Givot thieved the show, proving himself quite an impromptu commentator . . . The crowd rose when Renard's parents were introduced . . . They were in seventh heaven, sitting side by side all evening wreathed in perpetual smiles . . . And when Morton Downey told how good he is that it's Renard who's on tour with him, you believed it—because Morton's that sincere that if he felt like doing a bit of denouncing he'd probably have done so . . . For Morton was never one to mince words—and he is reputed to know all the words . . .

A landscape in oils by Lester Stevens was presented to the vast maestro—which should go well with the Oriental rugs . . . Few disregarded the Sunday taboo on formal dress . . . Helen Eager there with her Libyon Tashman beige . . . Dr. Henry Saphirstein introduced us to good-looking, black-eyed Maurice Black, Cumberland-orchestra-ite, and proudly announced that he and Maurice attended English high together . . . Charlie Goldberg, loyal and true, called for a Harms number . . . Every lily routes Renard made his now-famous speech, which consists in the remark, repeated several times, that "I am very happy" . . . However, Jacques is expected to develop a few variations on this theme in a short while, as Downey has insisted on coaching Jacques in speech-making . . . The same Downey left the tribute early was because a Boston lady who writes songs planked down a $5 note to bet him at the evening's start and took possession of his ear with reasons why he should acquire an interest in them . . . And he couldn't take it . . . So at the 10th argument why he should look over her songs he scrammed . . . It was a great night for Renard and for song-sters and song-publishers' representatives . . .

Mrs. Chesbro	Hilda Brasa

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

In the earlier days of "Irene" it was scaled and plotted as just another of those fluffy things in words and music, adroitly mixed with what was then referred to as human interest. It was a Broadway hit in the days when tailor-made gentlemen strolled over into 9th ave. and made fervent love to honest working girls. And there was a saloon on every corner. "Irene's" revival at the Majestic last evening brought back fond memories of the pre-saxophone period. It was ripe, mellow entertainment, happily blessed with tunes that will last, and unfolding exactly the kind of romance you are bound to enjoy in these petulous times.

As the spirit of revival is in the air, and the season of tulips just around the corner, no better choice for the inauguration of Milton Aborn's eighth week visitation of the good items of yesterday could have been devised. There is temptation to look upon all revivals with a critical eye and unfortunately, with a kind of gnawing feeling that they must be old-fashioned. The "Irene" you saw last night was refreshening quickly dispersed any such notion. Its age may have denoted a certain air of sentimental respect, but its quality as upstanding entertainment quickly drove the sentimental thought under and set up its own virtue as musical comedy well able to take care of itself a long time to place. The performance at the Majestic needed no Weeping Williams to remind you that music was there, and while was slipping over the footlights.

This Montgomery-Tierney-McCarthy combinations of lilting melody and engrossing story followed the pre-prohibition routine. The elite of Long Island and the fire-escape gossipers of Ninth ave. became blissfully co-mingled, with the usual complications. That, boiled down was James Montgomery's entangling narrative. To this was added Harry Tierney's music—the most eloquent of its day in sedate hotel dining rooms. Two numbers, "Alice Blue Gown" and "Irene" have lived to ripe old age and still hold their own to this night. Both are, and almost as much may be said of "Skyrockets." Mr. Tierney's contribution to "Irene" has definitely for itself on many occasions, both inside of the theater and out.

The impetuous, flippant Irene was admirably played by Helen Shipman. She was both an intriguing comedienne and engaging ingenue. Her song numbers were all that could be desired. James R. Liddy, man about town, seemed no stranger to the role, and Bobby Watson, Houston Richards and Lida Kane moved about in the easy manner of seasoned veterans.

* * *

With the inclination for revival so insistent it may be wondered why a speculation with "Irene" has so long been delayed. Surely it fully measures up to the best of the newer musical productions and outstrips most of them.

Radio Stars in Miss Porter in Scollay Hit Concert

By MOSES SMITH

At the Scollay, stars of the air scour in the Radio Revue this week. The most novel feature is the fact that none of these people are actors and make no attempt to be; the result is a naturalness and a charm that is rarely found on a vaudeville stage.

Irwin Cowper acted as announcer and master of ceremonies. Adrian O'Brien had no consideration of the fact his show must go on because his singing completely stopped it, while the crowd called for more and more. The Gossipers brought down howls of laughter with their swelling comedy. Hum and Strum are a triumph.

Doreen Glover, the "Dream Girl," is charming and has a lovely voice. George Wheeler and Emily McKenzie score with "Will You Remember" and "Somebody Loves Me." Guiseppe Gozzi pleased his audience with a couple of operatic selections. Kay, Kris and Brownie rendered several song hits. Edward Jardon, tenor, and the Jayson Sisters, pianists, completed the list of radio stars.

Gala Bill at Howard

At the Old Howard for the entire week is a generous bill of burlesque, vaudeville and talking pictures. The burlesque attraction, as presented by the Old Howard Stock Company, is "Georgia Peaches," produced by Ed Ryan. One of the outstanding features is the Spanish star, Lolita. There is a new comedian with the organization, Eddie Lloyd, also well, known to all burlesque followers. Mike Sacks and Fred Binder also are in every pace in the line of jollity.

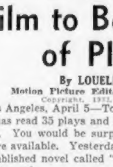
Ruth Chatterton's Next Film to Be "Children of Pleasure"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service, Inc.

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, April 5—To my certain knowledge Ruth Chatterton has read 35 plays and novels in a desperate effort to find a story. You would be surprised how few appropriate stories there are available. Yesterday Ruth and Darryl Zanuck okayed an unpublished novel called "Children of Pleasure," as the next Chatterton epic.



The galley proofs arrived air mail and a check was in the mail in a few hours. That's how quickly they reached their decision and how much they liked the story. Just as soon as the first Chatterton-Warner picture is said to be her best many a day.

Off to View Play

Sh, sh, don't dare breathe a word but Sidney Franklin and Ernest Vajda are off in a cloud of smoke to New York. They have gone to the big town to take a look at "Reunion in Vienna" which M-G-M will produce this coming season. And here is another one. If Lynne Fontana and Alfred Lunt can be talked out of playing in the picture Norma Shearer will be starred in the Fontana role. Miss Fontana has, it is whispered, insisted upon playing the role on the screen that she created on the stage.

Hollywood Chatter

That long-talked-of Barrymore picture, featuring the three, Ethel, Lionel and Jack, will be made on the M-G-M lot as soon as a story can be found. Everyone connected with the company would make this picture, which ought to be unique and well worth seeing. Speaking of the Barrymores, Mrs. Lionel is out of the hospital but Lionel is laid up with the flu. I tell you this James Dunn is getting to be the Beau Brummel of Hollywood. He and blonde Joan Marsh were together at the Cocoanut Grove and he seemed to be paying her the same devoted attention that he paid Anne Knight a few months ago. Well, Joan is as pretty as any of the younger generation, and they look well dancing together.

A Newcomer

A newcomer of whom we have heard is Cecilia Parker. She is slated as George O'Brien's leading lady in "The Killer," George's next. That, you will remember, is the Edward Stewart White picture. Irekon George's dad, the honorable Dan, is glad he is making a picture for George has the wanderlust and likes to hit out for the Orient, Honolulu or Havana whenever he gets a few weeks' holiday. Zasu Pitts, who continues to be a draw as a comedienne, is at Universal in "Back Streets." She is the saddest faced comic in the business with the exception of old Buster Face Keaton. Neil Hamilton is also at Universal. He is an American and a local boy and he is in "The Old Dark House." Well, he can talk with an English accent.

Snapshots of Hollywood

AL JOLSON singing and singing and singing long after closing time at "Wonder Bar." Nary a soul leaving the theater. Al welcoming all his motion picture friends with a royal greeting. The theater was filled with picture people who had been weekending when the play had its regular opening. JOAN BENNETT was there with her bridegroom, GENE MARKEY. MARY PICKFORD and HARRY NER SULLIVANS in their party. JOSEPH SCHENCK was hailed by Al as his best pal and even a personal performance. HARRY COHN arriving with MRS. COHN and his mother, coming in for his share of attention. The GEORGE ARCHINBAUDS came early with the LOUIS LEIGHTONS and were among those who applauded the loudest. CLARA BOW in dark green coat, much plumper than I have ever seen her, in a front seat with her husband, REX BELL. CLAIRE WINDSOR decked out in orchids in one set and gardenias in the other, smiling at friends in the audience. ERNST LUBITSCH, AL KAUFMAN, MRS. P. SCHULBERG and a very pretty girl, dining at Victor Hugo's before the show. Also the GENEVIEVE TOBIN in a light ensemble, escorted by a good-looking youth at the theater. JACK HOLT in new style sweater with turtle neck, at the Brown Derby. Low Down Hollywood younger than ever at the Derby.

The New Plays

MAJESTIC—"Irene," a musical comedy. A revival by the Civic Musical Comedy Company. Reviewed on this page.

WILBUR—"The Ringer," a mystery play by Edgar Wallace, featuring E. E. Clive. To be reviewed later.

COPLEY—"Peris," a comedy by Martin Brown, in which Mitzi appears as guest star. To be reviewed later.

Waldron's Casino

Bozo Snyder, inimitable "silent" comedian, began his fourth and last week at Waldron's Casino yesterday afternoon and last evening with two packed houses.

Strong Drama at Fine Arts

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Der Andere," on the Fine Arts screen this week, is transcendant drama, wherein four-wheel brakes couldn't keep the spectator from being gripped to the fingertips. Dialogue usually hampers action in pictures, but Fritz Kortner, an actor of amazing ability, reminiscent of Emil Jannings, rises above talk and any other hamstringing limitations, to turn in about as powerful a characterization as the silver sheet has seen in many a moon.

This German film, titled in English "The Man Within," has novelty in theme and refreshing skill in its technique. Kortner is a prosecuting attorney. In court he convicts a man whose defense is that he has a "dual personality." Later, Kortner himself, nerves frayed, develops just such a double being, and the ensuing story is strong drama, steadily unfolded and thrillingly portrayed.

Youth Reveals Its Talents

Outstanding features are the clever radio skit, with Lloyd Greeley, East Boston high school, Bill Stern of Chelsea high, and Marie Doherty of Memorial high, Roxbury, imitating Morton Downey, Tony Wons and Ray Sinatra, respectively.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

—By LOUIS SOBOL—

Down Memory Lane!

(With Billy Rose, a versatile gent of the theater.)

There are thousands who remember the night that I made my first earthly yelp, but they recall it for the wrong reasons. It was the night that McKinley was shot down by a crazed assassin in Buffalo. It was on 195th st. and Audubon ave., away up near Albany.

I won the 50-yard dash for 85-pound boys in the city interscholastic track meet and committed my first larceny through acquainting myself with the mannerisms of the starter and thus being able to beat the gun. I was almost expelled from the school for writing amorous notes to a papoose named Estelle Brody. I was all of 14.

A famous comedienne asked me who wrote "In the Middle of the Night" and being fascinated by the couplet:

"In the middle of a moment
You and I forgot what no meant."

She was Fannie Brice, whom I later married.

After winning the shorthand championship at the High School of Commerce I was taken under the benign wing of John Robert Gregg, creator of the shorthand style of that name, and gave exhibitions of my speed in staccato characters when 16, getting as much as $100 a week for my fleet fluency. It was at this time I mastered the trick of taking notes on a pad concealed in my pocket, and as the climax to my exhibition would write a sentence simultaneously with both hands, forward with one and backward with the other. Try that on your zither some night.

As secretary for A. G. Moulton, superintendent of construction at Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I., on our entrance into the war, I observed the youth of New York's sidewalks being transformed into fighting men. One day I saw a gent shot down by rifle fire from the water-tower at Yaphank. Enough poison was found on him to pollute all the water in the camp.

I became head of the reporters' division of the War Industries Board at Washington. Bernard M. Baruch was my boss and I lived in the same house with Charles Swem, Wilson's confidential secretary, and Joseph Schaeffer, McAdoo's secretary. It was my job to take down the words of Schwab, Gary, Farrell, Grace and the dollar-a-year men. Later I learned to my surprise that while I held this job I had been trailed constantly because I had access to so much confidential information.

It was while jotting down the eloquent arguments of William A. Brady and George M. Cohan, who appeared before the board to argue against the closing of the theaters, that I became theater conscious. I fell in' love with Peggy Mullen, from Lorain, Texas, a government clerk. When I was in Amarillo in January, with "Crazy Quilt," I called her up. She is married and has two kids.

The war over, I became a reporter on the Wall Street Journal and got the hunch that I could make a fortune in the market. I ran $300 up to $18,000 and lost it all in one afternoon in Stutz Motor. I was short and Ryan cornered the market.

Disillusioned at 20, I started on a trip around the world which took me to St. Louis, Texas, New Orleans and back to New York, making $800 in one day in San Antonio at Republican State Convention. The Negro delegates bolted the convention, held a counter gabfest on the lawn, and when they found out I could give them transcripts of their oratory poured their gold upon me.

I got fed up on shorthand reporting in the New York courts and decided that song writing was the racket for me. I arrived at this conclusion after slight acquaintance with stray theatrical people and song writers. My first songs were sentimental ballads and were rejected by Fiest and Berlin. Then in two years I wrote "Barney Google," "You Tell Her, I Stutter," "You've Got to See Mama Every Night or You Can't See Mama at All," and "That Old Gang of Mine." You can imagine my thrill when Leo Fiest accepted my first song, "Ain't Nature Grand?" and the double thrill when its sales ran to 100,000 copies.

Deciding to be a man-about-town after netting $60,000 on my first four songs, bought a Blitzen-Benz and a red satin apartment on Sixth ave. and 54th st. and then became a big night club patron. Finally I decided it would be cheaper to open my own night club. The result, the Back Stage Club on 58th st., between Sixth and Seventh aves., and boy, was that a night club.

I ran across Helen Morgan in a rehearsal hall at Remicks and gave her her first job in New York in the Back Stage Club. The first song she sang for me was "Tea For Two," and she sat on the piano because business was so good that there wasn't room for her on the floor. I recall handing Vlolinsky ten per cent of the club for singing a Jewish parody of "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers." Some of the memories: Selling wine at twenty fish a quart that cost me six smackers. The pre-curfew days with the last guest stumbling out at eleven in the morning. Raising Morgan from sixty to seventy-five a week. Raking in $60,000 profit on my first and only season at the Back Stage Club from such motley guests as the Rothstein mob, William Rhinelander Stewart, Jolson, Cantor, miscellaneous thugs and John Wanamaker.

Flushed with ambition, I opened the Fifth Avenue Club, the first of the five dollar cover haciendas. It was next to Samuel Untermyer's home and directly across the street from the home of John D. Rockefeller. Songs were furnished by Rogers and Hart, dances by Seymour Felix and the comedy sketches by Ballard Macdonald and Ralph Spence. A cute little squaw in the chorus was Nancy Carroll. Fifty dollars I ladled out each week to a brunette thrush, Lillian Roth.

Investigating my ledgers after running the Fifth Avenue Club for a season, I found I had a large bust on my hands. I couldn't sell stagger cider, and Soppo! So I out with a Mexican stand-off. Lost my money but saved my life.

I was introduced to Fannie Brice in 1927 by Ballard Macdonald. We cordially detested each other. Later I wrote "Mrs. Cohen on the Beach" for her, and Mayor Walker married us at City Hall in 1928, with Jay Brennan acting as best man, assisted by "Bugs" Baer.

Then I listened to the Hollywood siren and signed up with Metro-Goldwyn to rattle off theme songs at a grand a week. My contract was for six months, and during the sentence they didn't accept one of my ballads, but while I was carrying on my contractural vows I wrote "Rainbow Round My Shoulder" for Jolson's picture for Warner Brothers, and "It Happened in Monterey" for Paul Whiteman's "King of Jazz" for Universal.

I ran a high fever when "Crazy Quilt" played to $11,758.50 in a single performance in Memphis, Tex., last January in an auditorium as big as a National Guard armory.

My blood turned to gravy when I picked up a morning newspaper in Philadelphia the day after the opening of "Sweet and Low" and saw this line leering at me from the page: "The Rose That Does Not Smell So Sweet."

'LOVE PASTOR' IN DARK WITH GIRL MODEL

London, April 5 (INS)—An artist's model and a darkened lodging-house bedroom figured prominently today in the trial of the Rev. Harold Francis Davidson, 60, rector of Stiffkey Church, Norfolk, on charges of alleged improper conduct with a score of London girls.

The tableau was unfolded from the witness stand in Consistory court by Mrs. Alice Ernst, rooming-house proprietress. She named the artist's model as Nellie Churchill, former lodger in the house.

"The Rev. Mr. Davidson visited her frequently," she said. 'One night about 11 o'clock I went to her room.

"Davidson and Nellie Churchill were there and the light was not turned on. I told Davidson that was no place for a respectable man.

"He told me that the gas wouldn't burn. But after he left I tried the jet and found it worked."

Mrs. Ernst said Miss Churchill told her she worked three days a week as an artist's model "and the other three for Davidson." She testified the model is now in an asylum.

Mme. Augusta Faillie, another rooming-house proprietress, testified Davidson rented a room for a woman identified as "Mrs. Malone" in 1923.

"He visited her every day while he was in London," she said. "They took a little trip to Paris together. When she returned, she had a new dress."

Spring Floods Bring Disaster in Rumania

Bucharest, Rumania, April 5 (AP)—Spring floods have brought disaster to farms and villages on the banks of Rumanian rivers. Houses have been carried away, cattle drowned and numerous inhabitants are reported missing.

Ex-Follies Girl Accused as Forger

Los Angeles, April 5 (AP)—More trouble will await Natalie Chadwick, former Follies girl, when she is released from the Auburn, N. Y., prison next Saturday, Los Angeles police have anything to say about it.

They claim evidence that, while visiting in Whittier, Cal., she forged at least 50 sales slips at downtown stores.

IT MAY BE YOUR POEM TONY'S READING

LAST CALL FOR POEM CONTEST

Today's the deadline!

If you haven't sent your poetic contribution into the Boston Evening American's Tony Wons Contest editor, you'd better hustle, for after today no entry will be accepted.

Thousands of poems have poured into the Boston American office but there is room for those latecomers. From these many poems one will be selected by Tony Wons himself as the best of the lot.

A cash award will be made for this best poem by the RKO Keith's Boston Theater and the author will see and hear Tony broadcast the winning poem from the WAAB studios next Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock during the nationwide broadcast of "Tony's Scrapbook."

Ten runners-up in the contest, picked by the judges, who include Tony, Morton Downey, Jacques Renard, and a member of the Evening American staff, will receive two guest tickets to the Keith-Boston as well as an autographed copy of one of Tony's books.

Remember, the contest ends today and the judges will be busy between their personal appearances at the Keith-Boston and picking the winners.

Mail your poem immediately—today—to the Tony Wons Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Harrison Opposes Full Bonus Payment

Washington, April 5 (AP)—The pinch of national economy brought a declaration today from Senator Harrison of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the finance committee, against full payments of the veterans' bonus certificates.

The stand taken by Harrison, coupled with the known view of other Senate leaders, is believed to doom any prospect of enactment into law of the bonus payment measure.

Radio Fans Hear 2-Finger Shooting

Hammond, Ind., April 5 (AP)—A shooting the fans of radio station WMAE heard yesterday was real. Roland G. Palmer was putting some realism into a drama of the air and made noises like galloping horses, howling wind and rain on the roof.

Then he looked at his script and found a shooting was called for. So he reached for a gun and accidentally shot two of his fingers. He had to go to a hospital.

How ice automatically removes food odors

In an ice refrigerator—as every student of physics learns—there is a constant circulation of air, from the ice compartment to the food compartment, and then back again. So when the cooled air, on this constantly repeated journey through the refrigerator, passes over the foods, it picks up the food odors and carries them back to the ice. Here the odors quickly dissolve in the film of water on the surface of the ice—and are carried away through the drain. This constant, automatic removal of food odors is an advantage obtainable only with ice refrigeration.

FATHER COUGHLIN TALKS TO WOMEN

On Love, Marriage And the Home

Sin a Virtue If Religion Is False

READ HIS TALKS TO WOMEN

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

Royal Oak, Mich., April 5—The fearless and commanding apostle of the church, the understanding "Shepherd of the Air," Fr. Charles E. Coughlin, spoke thus to me:

"If I threw away religion, if I denounced religion, I would surround myself with the most adroit hi-jackers, learn every trick of the highest banking and stock manipulations, avail myself of the laws under which to hide my own crimes, create a smoke screen to throw into the eyes of men, and become the world's champion crook.

"If I refused to accept any religion as good, I would get everything within and without the law. If I didn't believe in religion, I would get everything for myself that I could lay my hands on in this world.

"Men and women who don't get everything out of life for themselves, if they don't believe in religion, if they reject religion and the world beyond, they are fools—asinine fools.

Irreligion Illogical
Without Faith in Next World Man Is Law Unto Himself

"They are illogical if they refuse religion and then don't go out and get all they can. Without religion man is a law unto himself.

"Those who deny religion are illogical. But those who deny religion and don't get everything for themselves are fools. If I didn't care what happened in the next world, if I didn't fear the consequences of the other life, if I was without religion, I would go out and get all that could be gotten.

"But that is what is wrong with civilization. It needs a fund of religion. It needs religion in the homes, in the schools, in the hearts and minds of men and women.

"Religion supports the greatest scheme of things. It has principles for political economy. A few of its principles wouldn't be amiss in the field of art. It has principles which lay the foundation of every phase of life.

Urges Pride in Faith
Half-Hearted Members of All Sects Condemned

"Take religion away and what authority have parents to say to little Johnny: 'You mustn't do that'; or to little Ethel, 'You must do this.' Religion places authority in the hands of parents.

"But are mothers accepting this responsibility? This authority?"

Powerfully frank, amazingly honest with himself and his millions of admirers, Father Coughlin denounced the irreligion which is sweeping the country.

He hasn't any use for "religious hypocrites," those half-way religionists, who neither are one or the other in their beliefs.

Upon the mothers of the nation he urged this plea:

"Bring up your children to be firm in whatever their faith. Teach them to stand up and be proud to say, 'I am Jew, Catholic or Protestant.' Teach them not to be ashamed of their faith or make apologies for their beliefs. Teach them to be good in their religion and to be firmly convinced that whatever is their religion, that religion is fine and good.

"Teach them that religion is just as good on Monday as on Sunday. Teach them that religion means more than blessing one's self and praying."

No man or woman can violate the laws of God and consider himself good, Father Coughlin continued.

"There are some who expect me to say a word about religion in the schools. And since there is no religion conducted in the schools, how much less of it is being taught in the home?

"There can't be a home without religion and without its practice there. And upon the shoulders, squarely and directly, of mothers and fathers falls this responsibility.

Father Coughlin, the famous "Shepherd of the Air," as he appears when speaking. Father Coughlin's inspirational broadcasts are known everywhere and to men in every walk of life. His messages to women are appearing daily in the Boston Evening American.

Homes Need Religion
Parental Influence and Discipline Founded on Faith

"The irreligious of the nation must be combated. Mothers must instil in children the meaning of religion and teach them to carry religion in their hearts always.

"I am not trying to teach parents how to be parents, since I am not a parent. But I want to instil them with the dignity of their office.

"When religion or God is not discussed in the home, it is not a home. It is not the proper place in which children, God's children, should be reared.

"All things in the home receive proper attention. The flower is watered properly. No one throws a bale of hay at it. The dog receives his meat and water and victuals fit for a dog. No algebra book is thrown at him. But as for the child. He, too, receives all that the canary and the flower and the dog receive, but does he receive the mental and spiritual attention?

"Do mothers attend to the spiritual needs of children today? In the schools a class in mathematics couldn't be conducted without a proper knowledge of arithmetic. But the fundamentals of religion, which is the underlying foundation of all science, are not taught.

"If mothers are complaining that their children are refuting their parental authority, let me say this. It is because mothers have given up the religion which invests them with authority.

"For after all—what is a home? A home is a little world in itself with its head in the father and its heart in the mother. It is a place where discipline should have a conspicuous position.

"If mothers and fathers take the question of discipline seriously, how do they delegate all parental authority to the school teacher?"

Which led Father Coughlin back to his major premise:

"Motherhood is woman's greatness, achievement and a child is as a mother makes him."

But more of this tomorrow. More of many other things pertinent to love and marriage, the home, the relationship between men and women.

(Discipline in the home will be Father Coughlin's topic of interview in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

HARVARD EXPLODES MYTH AND SHOWS WHAT FATE AWAITS A GRADUATE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF. ROGERS

HARVARD SEEMS TO BE interested in showing up what it calls "the myth of the bond salesman." This week's issue of the Alumni Bulletin contains an article by Donald H. Moyer, class of 1927, a member of the Harvard alumni placement service, which concerns the probable occupations of the men being graduated from Cambridge this year.

For many years now the satiric literature of the United States has made great play with the idea that the products of the major eastern colleges, especially Harvard, Yale and Princeton, make tracks direct for Wall Street, or State Street as soon as they are graduated. It has been a favorite jibe of the New York "liberal" fun makers that an athletic career, for instance, invariably commands a fat job in some banking or brokerage house and that our financial world is all cluttered up with ex-football players, to say nothing of tennis and golf stars. (The minor sportsmen apparently have to take care of themselves.)

Bond Selling Fails to Attract

But the Harvard Alumni Bulletin says no and proves it by statistics. "In 1929, when the Alumni placement service became established, it faced a task the performance of which would rest to a large extent upon this question of the occupational interests of Harvard graduates. If bond selling was the thing, we wanted to know it. If Wall Street was to be the destination, we must provide the transportation," it says.

For the past three years, therefore, a questionnaire was sent in November to the members of the class being graduated the following spring. It asked whether the man had made a definite choice of occupation, what that occupation was, any second choices, location of work and the reasons, and whether a position was actually waiting for a man on graduation. For three years the returns have come in, covering some 2000 seniors for the three years, an average of 88 per cent of each class, a not unreasonable statistical basis.

In addition, there exists a tabulation made of the choices of men in the class of 1924 checked by their actual occupations three years later. This check shows that the senior choices and the actual jobs three years later practically coincide. Consequently, the preferences of this year's senior class would seem a reasonable basis of prophecy—that is, if they succeed in getting jobs at all.

The results are interesting. For three years the average number of the men who wish to go into commercial or investment banking (bond selling) is only a bit over nine per cent of this class. This year it is only seven per cent.

Business Shows Falling Off

Of the other 90 odd per cent we find that only 25 per cent of the whole class are interested in business or industry. This is a considerable falling off from the high water mark of 47 per cent in 1923, since when there has been a steady decrease. It looks as if the Harvard senior is capable seeing the handwriting on the wall.

Medicine will take 19 per cent of this class of 1932, a steady increase from 7 per cent of the class of 1923. Teaching calls 13 per cent, higher than in any other previous year. Whatever else teaching may offer, it does seem to be safe, providing the endowed colleges do not suffer too heavily in their funds. Law has 17 per cent. This seems reasonable, because, although the legal profession is reputed to be overcrowded, the graduates of the Harvard Law School may well have some confidence as to future jobs and business.

The three leading professions, then, will take 50 per cent of the class, business another 25, and the remaineder will engage in architecture, engineering, government service, journalism, the ministry, etc. The fact that the number of prospective merchants and industrialists has decreased consistently during the past nine years (in spite of the repute of the Business School) is very significant, as is also the fact that some 58 per cent of the entire class plans to do graduate work of some kind. Nowadays, of course, high powered business demands graduate work as well as the other professions.

New Englanders to Stay at Home

The number of men who have been promised jobs before graduation is only eight per cent in 1932 and was not much better in previous years. And incidentally, most of the 55 per cent hailing from New England apparently want to stay in New England, instead of trying their fortunes in other parts of the United States or abroad. Perhaps the fact that one can usually get a square meal of victuals under the parental roof, no matter how bad business is, may have something to do with this lack of adventure. Or maybe it just means that hard times brought home to us the undoubted fact that for solid business and financial stability, old conservative New England remains the best bet in Uncle Sam's list of opportunities.

If this survey means anything, it means that the older and more firmly established colleges are still turning out young men who look upon higher education as an obligation for professional service. The old definition of a profession still holds and its attraction still remains almost three to one over the profit-making opportunism of business and finance. Bad as is the reputation of our modern lawyers and medical men for extreme profit making, there still remain many of the older tradition who look upon their profession as a trust and not as a racket, and these young men with the traditions of Harvard and her professional schools behind them may be trusted to continue the tradition.

At least, it looks as if we shall have to put the old bond-salesman joke in moth balls—at least until we have another infliction of Mr. Hoover's normal prosperity.

'PEEPER' ADDED TO DORCHESTER CRIME WAVE

POLICE IN DRIVE B. U. WILL PROBE ON 'PEEP EVIL CHARGE OF FRAT IN DORCHESTER HOUSE REVELS

Election Commissioner Harding Says He Calls in Vain for Aid; Four Breaks Reported

Dean Lord Heads Inquiry Into What Went on at Alleged Pajama Party

For the second time in a week help was called from police headquarters early today when a "peeper" appeared in the Fields Corner division of Capt. Harry N. Dickinson to add his scares to housebreaks, holdups and other crime in the district.

A flying squadron was sent to Kenwood st. residential section on the call of Maj. Charles J. Harding, election commissioner, who charged his report to the Fields Corner station brought no action.

Harding reported a prowler about his home and other homes in the vicinity for the past three nights.

He recalled the fright given Marguerite Hennessey and Irene Burns both of Lindsay st., who were chased by a man after they alighted from a street car at Geneva ave. and Waldeck st.

The flying squadron was joined by a force of crime experts from headquarters, sent out last week to halt crime in Dickinson's division.

The time lost in the long trip from headquarters allowed the peeper to escape, however.

Four more housebreaks in the district were under investigation today. Breaks were reported in the home of Mrs. Ellen Dillon of Rosedale st., in the parked automobile of Leo Zahley of Columbia rd., the home of Mrs. Bertha Korman of Rosemont st., and of Walter Remick Mt. Bowdoin ter.

The overall party—or was it a pajama party?—which has the exclusive Corey Hill district in Brookline aroused will be investigated fully by Boston University, according to announcement today by Dean Everett W. Lord.

Dean Lord said he had been instructed by President Daniel L. Marsh to head a committee of inquiry on regarding what took place in the Beta Kappa fraternity house in Mason ter.

Meanwhile Brookline residents are awaiting a report by Judge Philip S. Parker, town counsel, as to what steps can legally be taken to oust that fraternity from the mansion.

PAJAMA-CLAD GIRLS

The party took place Saturday night and neighbors complained to the Brookline selectmen about pajama-clad girls, but B. U. students asserted that it was a poverty party with the girls and men in overalls.

"This is the first situation of the kind that has ever arisen at Boston University," said Dean Lord.

"President Marsh has asked for a thorough, careful and systematic investigation. If punishment is due, it will be meted out."

WILD RIDE CHARGED

Corey Hill residents charge the the party was unchaperoned and that young men and women sat on beds and that one automus ran from the house clad only in running pants. Loud laughter and shouting roused the neighbors' sleep. Police called to the scene after a complaint of a group of drunken students found two men intoxicated.

Brookline residents say some time ago they demanded closing of another fraternity from the same house and the selectmen went to the Legislature and asked for authority to license such places.

This permission was refused, but authority was obtained to pass regulating by-laws, and this was done.

POLICE RESCUE BOY AS RAFT FALLS APART

PATROLMAN SUSZINSKI

Here's Chandler pond, Brighton, and the "hero pole" officer, Bernard E. Suszinski, and other police from Station 14 used in rescuing Richard Savage, 12, of Mitchell st., Brighton, when the boy's raft went to pieces as he was paddling across the pond. Officer Suszinski and young Savage both got drenched, but are recovering. (Staff photo.)

NEW TAXI RATE WAR NEAR

War is expected to flare today between rival taxi companies in Boston following the announcement of a drastic slash in rates by the Checker Taxi Co.

Frank Sawyer president of the Checker company, announced the 33⅓ per cent reduction in rates on all Checker cabs would go into effect today and that close to 200 more new cabs would be put on the streets of Boston with provisions of doubling the present fleet of 350 cabs within a short time.

The new rate equals that of the Independent Taxicab Operators Association, the Beacon Hill Town and Central cabs, which on 15 cents for the first quarter mile and five cents for each additional third. Until now the Checker cabs was 25 cents for the first third mile and ten cents for each additional third.

The Checker company attributed the slash in rates and the employing more drivers to the City of Boston's unemployment payment campaign and the "Find a Job" campaign of the American Legion.

OFFICER SAVES BOY IN POND

Carrying a rope and pushing a long pole Patrolman Bernard E. Suszinski of the Brighton station, saved Richard Savage, 12, of Mitchell st., Brighton from drowning in Chandler pond near his home.

The boy on a makeshift raft came to within 15 feet from the shore but when he saw the officer coming he panicked and his screams had brought a dozen of the police officers in the scene of the pond.

Two 75-foot lengths of rope used for parade purposes were knotted together and a pole was secured at station 14 wide but found he could not get close enough to fling the rope to the boy. He then swam pushing the pole ahead of him. Finally the officer was just able to reach the boy with the pole, and he was rescued by hand.

The officers swam then pushed the officer and the boy to safety.

REASON GIVEN IS 'FOR GOOD OF SERVICE'

Seven Hull firemen one a captain have been dismissed by Chief Henry J. Stevens, it became known today.

The men dropped are Capt. George McKay, David Templeton, John Cahill, James Jeffrey and Leo Michael and William Reno. Their pay was $700 each a year.

Asked about the dismissal today Chief Stevens said:

"These men haven't taken care of their jobs as they should and I have taken them off the rolls of the department for the good of the service."

Stevens denied his action was the result of the recent campaign in which he won election to the board of selectmen over former Police Chief Frank M Reynolds. It was reported all of the men dropped from the fire department had backed Reynolds.

LAST TRIBUTES PAID MORRILL

Mrs. Timothy H. Mulvane widow of the famous baseball player was also among the mourners.

Interment was in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

FLIGHT THRILLS OCTOGENARIAN

Old Jim Whitfield retired blacksmith of Francistown N. H. realized a lifelong ambition when he took an airplane ride from the Dennison airport and got a good aquint of Boston from the air.

Bear in a pint of rye presented him by a friend who thought he might need a stimulant during the ride, Old Jim, who was 84 his last birthday donned helmet and earphones before he took off with Pilot Instructor Charles Hamilton of the Weonit Flying Club.

"Only one fellow in Francistown beat me to it," said Jim as he arrived back at the airport to offer an account of his ride. "He was a young feller only 72 but he didn't stay up half's long's I did."

Jim added that he didn't even open the pint.

Old Jim's been visiting friends at Quincy and returns to Francistown tonight to tell the home folks all about it.

GUY WAITS TO O. K. PLAN

Plans for reopening the Bancroft Trust Co., of Worcester reported to be practically completed have not been brought to the attention of Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy, it was stated today.

According to the commissioner's office, if the bank directors are working on such plans, they are not yet in definite shape for submission.

Assurance was given, however, that if sufficient money was put up to make it safe to reopen the bank, Commissioner Guy will authorize it.

Alcohol Is Seized in Medford Raid

Federal agents headed by Field Agent Dennis T Lordan made a raid in Bowdoin st. Medford last night, seizing, they say, several hundred gallons of alcohol and several cases of liquor. They arrested Ralph J. Stowa, giving an address in Princeton st., Medford.

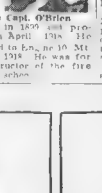
The raid was a sequel to the capture of two autos in Medford by Federal Agents Harry Cochrane and Edward Thomas. The drivers gave the names of Harold Nason of Bowen ave., Medford, and Robert Priestly of Prospect st., Brookline.

Charges Against Mack Are Postponed

Disposition of larceny and statutory charges here against Harry Mack were postponed today to enable Washington authorities to question Mack on the Leavenworth prison riots last fall.

Mack was recently returned here from Canada on a default warrant. He told a story of having learned of the Lindbergh kidnap plot while in jail in Windsor, Ont. He faces deportation from Canada to Scotland for alleged offenses there.

CAPT. O'BRIEN OF ENGINE 10 DIES



Capt. Daniel J. O'Brien a member of the fire department for 33 years and brother of Patrick C. (Parke) O'Brien sports editor of the Boston Sunday Advertiser died today in the Baker Memorial Hospital, where he had been ill since Thursday.

Capt. O'Brien was born in the West End on Feb 25, 1872 and lived there all his life. He made his home at 73 Chambers st. with his sister, Annie and brothers, Parke" and John.

He was appointed to the fire department in 1899 and promoted to captain April 13th. He has been attached to Eng. 10 Mt. Vernon st. since 1918. He was for many years instructor of the fire department drill school.

ALCOHOL KILLS BOSTON MAN

Peabody, April 5. Despite efforts of firemen and two doctors who worked over his prostrate form for nearly an hour with inhalators, Thomas Sinclair of Hanover st., Boston, died in his cell at the Peabody police station today a few hours after his arrest for drunkenness.

Medical Examiner S. K. Tucker said death was due to a coma from.

Girl, 5, Is Victim of Sleeping Sickness

A sleeping sickness victim Gloria Nickerson, five, of Chatham, has been a patient in the Whidden Memorial Hospital, Everett, for the past 10 days, it became known today when Dr. Arthur Jackson, attending her, made a spinal puncture in an effort to save the child. The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Nickerson.

Court Hears Plea to Oust Volpe, Guardian

Hearing on the petition of Miss Alice G. Porter, 53, of Medford, Radcliffe graduate and former Boston school teacher, for removal of Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe as her guardian opened today in Middlesex Superior Court before Judge Wilford E. Gray.

Miss Porter seeks freedom to bring civil suits totaling $200,000 against the estate of her late cousin, Allan A. Hooker.

Final Arguments in Gillette Suit Begin

Final arguments in the $21,000,000 Gillette Safety Razor Co., suit were opened today, the 62nd day of the long hearing before Judge William M. Prest, as master. Atty. Edward F. McLennen opened for Frank J. Fahey, former director and general manager.

Twenty-three other attorneys were ready to be heard and the arguments are expected to last a week.

BAR PAPERS ARE 'FARMED OUT,' SAYS ARCHER

Chance Remark Leads to Expose, Dean Reveals; Facts Are Difficult to Obtain

This is the second of a series of articles by Dean Archer, of Suffolk Law School, giving his views of the present law situation in Massachusetts and the nation.

By GLEASON L. ARCHER, LL.D
Dean of Suffolk Law School

"My brother told me last night that while in a lawyer's office some weeks ago he saw bar examination books lying around as if they were being corrected. The lawyer is not a member of the board."

The size her had told him of the office one day in September 1931 to ask me this significant bit of information.

"But examination books," I exclaimed, "why the examiners claim that they always correct their own papers."

RECALLS REPORT

"There is no mistake," replied my visitor. "It seemed incredible to me. But my brother is very positive that he saw examination papers of the July, 1931, examination."

"Have him get in touch with me at once," I urged. "The bar examiners are quite obviously doing strange things nowadays but I never dreamed that they had turned the job of correcting papers over to others."

Before my visitor departed I recalled to him that the Massachusetts Bar Association at its annual convention of the American Bar Association I had heard Hon. R. Barry Cham... of the Massachusetts Board of Bar Examiners state that the board always corrected the papers in person. I took down the Bar Association Year Book for 1931. Sure enough, at page 611 I found Mr. Bailey's statement. It read in part as follows:

"We had the books so constructed that they could be taken apart readily, and each member of the board was given six answers of each man or woman, so that one-fifth of the work of each man was read and corrected by each member of the board and each one marked . . . and we got comparable results, and we thought it was pretty fair, and we have carried that on for 25 years. We think it works out fairly well."

CUSTOM CHANGED

This did not sound like farming out papers for correction. But quite evidently the board had changed its long continued custom.

The brother of my visitor himself a lawyer a graduate of Suffolk Law school a few days later confirmed the report of the sale of the bar books. But when I asked the name of the lawyer he replied that he had made the discovery by accident during a conference and consequently did not feel at liberty to disclose the lawyer's name without the latter's consent.

I, of course, respected the high sense of ethics of the graduate of my school and did not press him further. Quite evidently he was not able to secure the information I sent so the secret slumbered.

In the meantime I visited the clerk's office of the Superior Judicial Court to see if there was any written order with regard to the filing of papers by the board examiners. I also wrote a letter to the bar examiners asking to be informed regarding the matter. I also asked to see the papers. Attorney General Joseph Warner and I had several lawyers on our staff to help us look for information.

CHECKS EXPENSES

As a last resort I went to the office of the State Auditor early in January, 1932. They could give me no information except to say that all official vouchers would be on file in the office of the Comptroller.

I explained to the woman in charge of the latter office that I was interesting the expense account of the Board of Bar Examiners for 1931.

At my request she therefore the vault and returned with a bundle of papers marked Board of Bar Examiners and labeled 1931. When we undid the package there dropped out upon the desk the very information for which I had so long searched.

FEES RECORDED

Here were the names and addresses of the candidates, the number of books examined by each and the amount of fees paid by their sponsors.

"Fifty cents a book," I exclaimed. "Applicants pay $15 for an official examination and this board of bar examiners doubles them by turning the job over to others at 50 cents a book."

"Oh, but the profession is so overcrowded," murmured the woman, that false propaganda springing into her mind.

"Even if it were overcrowded," I replied, "that is no excuse for injustice, nor for discrimination among those who submit themselves for examination."

"Oh, of course not," she agreed hastily.

Then I did some figuring and discovered that although the vouchers read 50 cents a book yet it must mean book-section, which even then totalled only $2.50 per applicant.

While nearly a thousand automobiles were packed in the South Boston artery at the peak of the morning traffic, tugs labored for an hour today to release the S. S. Monterey, 22,000-ton Matson liner, which became wedged in the Fore River Bridge while en route to the Fore River shipyard.

The ship was finally released, with no serious damage to the bridge or vessel, and proceeded to [illegible]

ADVERTISING IN ART EXHIBITION

Fifty-three examples of advertising art, both black and white and in colors, will be featured at the 11th annual exhibition all next week at the Chamber of Commerce.

The works include many by prominent local members of the Associated Artists and Designers of New England.

Final plans for the exhibit will be announced tomorrow by the Chamber's committee on industrial and civic art, headed by James H. Faircloud, jr., chairman.

AGENTS SEIZE A CUTTING PLANT

Dry agents told Commissioner Jenney, in federal court today, they found a so-called "cutting" plant in operation in an apartment in Bowdoin st., Medford, and seized 258 gallons of alcohol, 12 quarts of sherry wine, 16 cases of assorted liquor, two gallons of rye whiskey and flavorings.

Included in the equipment of the plant were hydrometers, labels bottles, boxes, bric-a-brac, empty cans and other material.

Four men alleged to be involved in the operation of the plant were held in a total of $3000 for a hearing on April 15. They are Ralph P. Stowe of Princeton st. and Harold Nason of Bower st., both in Medford, charged with possessing liquor; Robert Priestly of Prospect st. and Harry MacWhinney of Harvard st., both in Brookline, charged with possessing and transporting.

1 DEAD, 5 HURT IN BLAZE IN SOMERVILLE

General Alarm Sounded, Three Other Cities Help Battle Masonic Block Fire

One fireman is dead, five others are injured and a score are recovering from smoke inhalation today as a result of a general alarm fire in the old Masonic block, Union sq., Somerville.

The blaze, menacing the entire district and disrupting auto and trolley traffic, caused damage of $175,000, according to District Chief Young.

Firemen from Cambridge, Boston and Arlington aided the Somerville department and crews from Everett and Medford moved in to other sections of Somerville.

Lyle Sterling, 63, of Engine 4, Somerville, collapsed on duty and died at the Central Hospital early today. Officials attributed his death to exhaustion and smoke inhalation.

INJURED BY GLASS

Sterling was a member of the department 26 years and was well known as a fire horse driver in the days of the old Mystic and Combination Park race tracks.

James Lydon of Engine 3, John Connarton of Engine 4 and Thomas Connors of Engine 4 and George Drew of Engine 2 were treated in Central Hospital for severe cuts.

At least 20 others were treated for smoke inhalation.

Breaking out late last night, the flames raged unchecked until near 1:2 a. m., when firemen, with aid from three other cities, succeeded in bringing the blaze under control.

The building, a three-story structure, was one of the oldest in the city and extends from 21 to 31 Union sq. Officials said the blaze started in the basement of Yanow's dry goods store at 23 Union sq. From there it spread to a lunchroom at 23, driving several customers and employes to the street.

FLEE THROUGH SMOKE

A number of men in an upstairs pool parlor in the block, also forced to flee down smoke-filled stairways. Customers and employes in a drug store at 27 and a jewelry store at No. 29 also fled. Other stores in the first floor were unoccupied.

Chief Joseph L. Cribbey ordered a general alarm when firemen reached the scene. Aid was sent from Charlestown, Cambridge and Arlington. A large crowd was attracted to the scene and it was necessary to rope off the fire area.

KILEY CASE MAY BE POSTPONED

If Herman Snyder, arrested in Philadelphia for alleged participation in the murder of James Kiley, Somerville gas station manager, fights extradition, his trial and those of two other youths for the slaying will be postponed, Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe of Middlesex County announced today.

The cases of James Garrick and Edward Consalvi, now at East Cambridge jail, are set for next Monday and if Synder comes here without a fight he will go on trial with them on time.

Police Inspector O'Connell of Somerville was on his way to Philadelphia today with the necessary papers but no word had been received here as to Snyder's intentions.

Snyder, sought for 11 months was recognized by a seaman from a photograph printed in a detective magazine. The seaman, whose name is being withheld, will receive rewards totaling $1100, it is understood.

SPOT POND FISH TASTE GONE

Engineers of the Metropolitan District Commission today announced a sweeping victory in their battle against organisms in Spot Pond, Melrose, which flavored the water of that drinking supply with a fishy taste.

The official communique said that the organisms have been destroyed, and that, owing to most of them, and conditions are practically back to normal. The offensive odor is also gone.

It was said a faint taste remains from the chemicals used in the battle, although the amount has been greatly reduced.

The victory followed several weeks of intensive effort on the part of the engineers, during which time residents of Melrose and Stoneham drank water from Crystal Spring in the Fellsway.

Gov. Ely made it plain that unless the situation was cleared he would take steps to provide pure drinking water, possibly from the Wachusett reservoir.

Microphone Minstrel Man Tries Writing

Morton Downey Contributes Column

EDITOR'S NOTE: Everything should be notes where Morton Downey is concerned, vocally or otherwise. Giving his pipes a brief respite, he puts a few on paper today in the following manner.—N. F. T.

By MORTON DOWNEY

By special dispensation of the copyright owners, this tenor is going to do a little radio columning. Since I have very little to occupy my time while in Boston it will be a pleasure. Appearances at the RKO Keith Boston theater and before the WNAC microphone for my friends in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, are hardly enough to keep me busy.

MUCH APPRECIATED

I want to take some of the Boston American's valuable space right now to extend thanks to a man who has been my friend for a number of years, Major James M. Conley. When he welcomed Tony Wons, Jacques Renard and me to Boston Saturday he was repeating a thing he had done for me 10 years before. Then I was absolutely unknown, yet I was given the City Hall and was given the key of the city in as friendly a manner as though I had been a visiting ambassador. When Tony said over the radio at the reception breakfast that he wanted Major Conley to turn as good a voice as he had Mayor Curley, he expressed something that would have taken me many more words to say. Yet even that does not completely explain how grateful we are.

TALKING TO MYSELF

I am going to ask myself a question, conduct a little interview. What do I, Morton Downey, think of radio. I'm so close to it, in fact it occupies all of my waking hours I really should know something about it. As a matter of fact I get most of my information about radio second hand. I almost never find time to tune in. Why, when we opened this vaudeville tour in St. Louis I had my first chance to really listen to Jacques Renard's band. Before I had always been in the studio with it and hadn't been able to consider how it sounded. I find that I like it.

Most of my radio reports come from my wife, the former Barbara Bennett, and from my brother, who always threatens to break my leg when I make a mistake on an Irish song. If Andy gets into a wrestling match with Bullneck Mooseface, if if the Colonel and Eudd bit a bum note in their terrific theme song on the mighty gas pipe organ, or if Singin' Sam forgets to say "Howdy folks," I hear of it only through someone else.

COMING AND GOING

Barbara (Mrs. Downey to you) will join me here. We're expecting her either tonight or tomorrow. She will stay till I'm glad to see me and it shouldn't take many guesses to figure out what I wired back—I will be, too. I've been poisoned here fast on motorcycles, but not quite like the Boston boy blues do whizzing us back down Commonwealth ave. from WNAC studios. They're instructed to get us to and from in no much time, whatever it is, and they haven't used the allotted minutes yet. When they kick over their motorcycle starter just before we get going, they seem to have an expression that indicates a feeling of "We'll deliver this one to him dead or alive!" But the ride is thrilling and great fun—when it's over.

HUB, HUB, HOORAY!

A bit of surprising inside information came to me when I found out the complete and unabridged name of your Uncle N. F. T. Im told it's Newcomb Fletcher Thompson! No wonder he prefers using his initials. And say, as Tony might put it, Boston has some exceptional microphone talent, believe me. During little informal visits between our shows and broadcasts here, I have heard your Ranny Weeks, Adrian O'Brien, Cliff O'Rourke, Carl Moore, Billy Payne and Mickey Alpert. In all sincerity, I think they're immense. Yes, and a word of thanks goes to the studio staff personnel at The Hotel Buckminster for the courteous, efficient manner in which they have attended to the details of our Camel Quarter Hour since we arrived. Right here, I'll sign off telling the whole wide world this is a grand town, full of grand people and Tony Wons might be interested to know I don't care who's listening when I say so.

Barry Deane Longs to Take Judith Brian in His Protecting Arms

How the Story Starts

Judith Brian, young and pretty secretary in the Knickerbocker Bank, attracted to Barry Deane, handsome young executive, but tells herself it is ridiculous to think seriously of a man so far above her. She is thrilled, however, with the prospect of merely seeing him when summoned to his office.

Now Read On

MAY CHRISTIE

Author of "High Speed Girl" and Other Famous Novels

"MR. DEANE wants you, Miss Brian. Right away, please." The voice of the manager, which was usually quite pleasant, sounded brusque.

Judith started. "Was—was there anything wrong with my work?"

"He will tell you himself. He just telephoned." Judith could see the manager was annoyed about something.

She'd blundered in that list, of course! Apart from the pi de-fer always took in turning out a good piece of work just when she had most wanted to please, she had fallen down!

All about her were instances of how easily one can lose one's job in New York if one doesn't give complete satisfaction.

But it would break her heart to go away from here, to give up the work she loved. And—more than all, his face again—the desolation of that thought was like a cold gray wind . . .

SHE MISUNDERSTOOD

She found him at his desk.

He looked gravely up at her as she entered, but showed no sign of displeasure as he rose and handed her the list.

"You evidently didn't understand what I wanted, Miss Brian. I ordered a record to be made of all the closed accounts in the section of the city that lies between 84th and 46th sts., from Sixth to Third aves., with the dates of their closing. This list does not carry any data. Will you please add them, and I would like to have this list back before you leave. It's rather tired."

"Why, of course—I'm sorry—how stupid of me—I'll get right at it," said Judith in a low, apologetic voice.

He turned away at once to a pile of other papers, and Judith went back to her own room. The practical, level-headed Judith was uppermost now. She was furious with herself for her stupidity, and angrier still that she had permitted herself to dream so foolishly of him.

She would remedy all that now. It was 5 o'clock—time to go home—but she would work like a Trojan.

There was a light of determination in her eye as her nimble fingers clicked along the machine for a good hour and a half. The day staff had all left the bank by now, and the night bookkeepers had come in to Judith's department.

SHE WORKED LATE

"There! That's okay," she said to herself a quarter of an hour later when she had read her amended list through twice. She drew a quick breath as she rose from her desk, conscious of a sharp crick in her back. The fingers of the clock in the corridor pointed to 10 minutes of seven—would Mr. Deane have waited? Anyhow, it was up to her to take the list along and deliver it on his desk.

He was in his office as she had expected he would be. His keen eye ran down the typewritten record.

She nodded.

"Then you can go. And thanks very much." He looked directly at her, noting for the first time the transparent pallor of her face. "Why, you look pretty tired, Miss Brian," he said, a note of alarmed compunction in his voice. "Sit down for a minute. Can I get anything for you—a glass of water, or anything?"

"It's nothing." Judith managed to blurt out, though she was all of a sudden conscious that an aching of the late Mr. J. P. Morgan on the wall above her was lurching up and down in the funniest manner. She put out her slim white hand and caught the edge of Barry's desk to steady herself, for indeed the whole room, including Barry himself, seemed to be doing most oddly.

MADE HER DRINK

"Here. Take a chair."

With very strong but very gentle hands Barry Deane pushed Judith down into a deep leather-covered chair with a tilted back which fairly enfolded the slight form of Judith. He stepped over to a great glass jar in a corner of the room, and brought water in a paper cup, and made her drink every drop of it.

"I feel that I'm to blame for this," he said in his charming, wellbred voice as he hovered anxiously above her. "Now just you keep still—"

The world seemed to float away from Judith as she lay with closed eyes against the russet leather chair that carried the bright tones of autumn. It formed a lovely background for her beauty that she white now like a snowdrop frail and drooping. There were purple shadows underneath her eyes, under the thick tangle of dark lashes. Her softly rounded cheeks were waxen pale, and a warm wash of pity swept over Barry Deane as he stood helplessly looking down at the face of this young girl that was so touching in its fatigued beauty.

It was all his fault—what a brute he'd been—impulsively he lifted a cold little hand between his two warm palms and started chafing it.

SAW HER BEAUTY.

He felt a clumsy fool as he stood there trying to infuse some warmth into her hands—curiously disturbed by the sudden revelation of the beauty of this girl whom for months he had regarded—if he ever noticed her at all—as merely a capable adjunct in a business office.

The long line of her delicate white throat—her mouth that was like a flower—the way her wall-flower-colored hair waved like the fronds of a fern back from her blue-veined forehead.

Thoughts vivid as motion pictures were flashing through his mind, of other, more fortunately placed girls he knew and in whose world he moved, whose lives formed such a contrast to that of this young girl whom circumstances had forced to earn her daily bread beyond her strength for—see today—ten hours at a stretch . . . A feeling of overwhelming pity took him that he could have knelt at her feet and humbly begged her pardon.

HE FELT EMOTION

And mixed with this was another emotion more disturbing still . . . he was astonished at himself, but it was there . . . to take this lovely child into his arms and carry her away and care for her and make her bloom as Nature had intended her to bloom, far from the roar and rush of Wall Street.

Judith's lashes suddenly fluttered, and the faintest color tinged her cheek bones that in Celtic fashion were set rather high in her heart-shaped face. It was as though a lamp were lit in an alabaster vase or, by the force of his pity and anxiety, as if the young man had galvanized a marble Galatea into life.

Her eyes opened, and met his, and held them. It seemed to Barry then as though he were looking into the deep, limpid pools that the tide leaves among the rocks. He wanted to look down and down into her eyes—and a dizzifying feeling came to him that he would like to drown in those clear depths.

HE HELD HER HAND.

"Why, Mr. Deane . . . I'm sorry . . . I—I must have been a little faint!"

"That's okay—I mean I'm sorry too—" He still held her hand, and, as she suddenly realized that strong, warm fingers clasped her own, she had the strangest feeling as if an electric current raced from that point of contact through her whole slim body, flowing, flowing, between herself and him as though to bind each to the other, and for a fleeting moment the very blood in her veins seemed to sing with joy, and she could hear her own heart thudding.

Then Judith drew her hand away, a flush staining her cheeks. She made as though to rise, but Barry Deane insisted she must wait a moment. He said, with a boyish earnestness, that he couldn't forgive himself for having made her work so late, and wearing her out, and he would get a taxi for her, and if she didn't feel all right in the morning he would speak to the manager in her department, and fix it so that she could take a day off, and rest up a bit.

HEAVENLY KIND.

"He's being heavenly kind," thought Judith, with a thrill that was a little pang of pain for the flying loveliness of this minute. "I wasn't wrong—he's just as fine and wonderful as his handsome face would indicate." Tears ached at her throat and sprang to her eyes. By sheer force of will she drove them back, quickly lowering her protective tangle of thick lashes.

The tears that his sympathy had brought having been forced down, Judith, with her hands folded in her lap, stole a long look at Barry Deane as he bent over the papers.

To be loved by such a man to feel his kiss—a tremor passed through Judith as against her will and better judgment her eyes rested on his mouth that was such a mixture of strength and sweetness.

Fashion Note

AT LAST there is something new in cloth coats. We have just seen a coat done in dark brown bouclé woolen with a collar, notched revers and waistcoat front all in summer ermine. The waistcoat is buttoned on with dark amber buttons in a double-breasted fastening. The pockets at the waistline have narrow stripe of the brown ermine, and the same fur trims the wide cuff

The Beauty Box

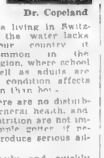
WHITE of egg makes a refreshing complexion mask, acts as a skin tightener. You fluff it slightly with a fork, spread it upon a freshly bathed skin surface, let it remain until the flesh feels tight and drawn. Then lave away with tepid water and give the face a three-minute pressure with an ice cube, after which treatment the witch hazel bottle is brought forth to contribute its part to the beautifying program.

Goiter Can Be Cured Without the Knife

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IN THE FRONT of the neck, close to the Adam's apple, is an important structure, the thyroid gland. When its gland enlarges we have the condition known as goiter.

Simple goiter is caused by a deficiency of iodine in the diet and is common in regions where iodine is lacking in the drinking water or in the food supply. It is a frequent disorder of people living in Switzerland, where the water lacks iodine. It is also very common in the Great Lakes region, where school children as well as adults are afflicted. The condition affects girls more often than boys.



Dr. Copeland

As a rule there are no disturbances in the general health, and appetite and nutrition are not impaired but simple goiter, if neglected, may produce serious ailments.

Goiter is easily and quickly recognized by the swelling of the gland in the neck.

Fortunately, since it is known that a lack of iodine in the water and food produces goiter, it may be prevented by the addition of iodine to the diet. In sections where goiter is prevalent, health officials administer iodine to school children at definite periods. In some sections iodine in small amounts is added to the municipal water supply.

Iodine should never be used in the water supply, however, unless there is a definite iodine deficiency in the community. It should never be taken as a medicine, certainly, without the consent and supervision of a physician. It is a harmless preparation when used scientifically, but can do great damage when taken unnecessarily.

Under normal conditions, the body requires a very small amount of iodine. This is well taken care of by the food we eat. It is well to remember that shellfish, such as scallops and oysters, are an excellent source of iodine, and this food should be included in the diet at least once a week.

Never neglect any swelling or tumor-like growth of the neck. I am sorry to say that many individuals overlook the importance of this condition. They hesitate to consult a physician for they fear the "knife." This is one condition where it rarely happens that surgery is necessary. However, there are certain thyroid growths that require operation. In these cases delay is dangerous.

Answers to Health Queries

F. M. E. Q.—What will reduce the hips?

A.—You must reduce the weight in general. Eat very sparingly of starches, sugars and fats. Get regular systematic exercise. A gradual reduction in the amount of food consumed, with the regular exercise, will work wonders in most cases.

MRS. H. W. Q.—What would make a child persist in scratching the nose? What can be done to overcome the habit or trouble.

A.—This is usually indicative of pin or intestinal worms. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

ANNOUNCE MAKEUP OF BRITISH WALKER CUP TEAM

FANNING

—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

BIT ON DRIVER CARROLL BACKS FOR $1000

What is the secret of hitting? How is it that a fellow like Johnny Indrisano, who is one of the longest balls on the links, hits 'em so long in fact, that Dan Carroll has $1000 to wager Johnny can outdrive anyone in golf from Bobby Jones down—isn't a knockout puncher in the ring? Put a driver in his hands and let Indrisano tee off with Jack Dempsey, Ernie Schaaf and Charlie Retzlaff, the three heaviest hitters of the present day, and Johnny will drive one so far there would be nothing to it. I am willing to wager the mighty Babe Ruth would be unable to reach the Home Run King's drive. Indrisano has himself, a couple of times, teed and then outdrive the King of Swat. Let Johnny tee off with Lou Brouillard who he meets in the Garden ring next Friday night, and Indrisano would come pretty near doubling any distance Larruping Lou might make. Yet when it comes to boxing Lou is considered much the heavier hitting of the two. Why can Indrisano outhit Brouillard on links, and not in ring? What is the secret of hitting?

Power? Yes, power has something to do with it. There's plenty of power in those mighty shoulders of Babe Ruth. But so is there power in the broad backs and oaken arms of Henri Deglane, Jim Londos, Ed George and the Masked Marvel and other of the wrestling marvels, who will be seen in the two big charity grunt and groan carnivals here, tomorrow and Thursday. But none of those mighty men can smack a golf ball half as far as Johnny Indrisano. To be a hitter a man must have plenty besides plain power. The secret of hitting is power plus. And plus a whole lot. Timing, snap, skill, many other things enter into hitting, whether it be baseball, golf or boxing.

Johnny Indrisano has that rare combination of power, timing and skill that goes for a great hitter on the links. Why is it he can't knock 'em out of their brogans in the ring? Some experts would answer Indrisano is a boxer. He is wonderfully speedy and clever. A clever boxer can't hit. No? How about little Jimmy Wilde, Jem Driscoll, Packy McFarland, Benny Leonard, Abe Attell, Mike Gibbons? They all were wonderful boxers and wonderful hitters as well. Yet as far as Indrisano is concerned his style of boxing really does handicap his hitting. To be a hitter he would have to change it. Many boxers have suffered a gain or loss in hitting power through change of style. Mike McTigue, for instance, started in boxing as a knockout artist, became clever and lost his punch.

Johnny Indrisano figuratively is between the devil and the deep blue sea. As Cartoonist Ray Soat than tells you, Johnny doesn't know whether he is a great fighter and a good golfer or a great golfer and a good fighter. In the ring he has beaten a couple of champions. Only a few days ago he got the decision over Jackie Fields, who is recognized as champion in an unrecognized match, and now is matched to meet Lou Brouillard, former world's champion, for the right to meet Fields in an official championship match. On the links Indrisano has an 8 handicap in the State ranks. He plays Wollaston in 78 and the record for the course is 72. Anyone who does Wollaston in 78 not only is a good golfer, but a great one.

Down in Emporium, Pa., Dan Carroll and the club professional measured a drive of Indrisano's. It was 365 yards on a slightly uphill course. That is the drive which caused Carroll to back Indrisano against the world for $1000. Johnny had played with Sarazen and Farrell and outdriven them on every shot. His reputation as a driver is so well known in pro circles that none of the golfers will cover Carroll's money. Johnny does the 7th hole at Franklin Park, 557 yards, a par 5 hole, in 3 using a driver and a No. 5 brassie to get on the green. You who have played Franklin Park, know what a 3 on the 7th hole means.

Great a boxer as Indrisano is, he loves his golf better. He hopes the reputation and prestige he gains in the ring will aid him in securing a position as a club professional. He considers that golf and long hours spent in the sun and open "made" him. As a boy Johnny was tubercular. Now he is the picture of health and golf did it. From the start he showed adaptness at the ancient Scottish pastime. Back in 1923 when he was caddying at Wambuck Country Club up in the White Mountains, he won the caddy championship.

"I'd rather play golf than eat," says Johnny, "and that's going some for there is nothing the matter with my appetite. If winning a ring championship will get me the job as professional at some big club, I will win it. The tenure of ring champion only is a few years at most. Golf is a life job. Golf is good for the health. Boxing if you stick at it too long is bad. But I want a ring title and the money that goes with it. I beat Jackie Fields a fortnight ago and I'll win even more decisively over Brouillard. Those sluggers who come in trying to knock your block off are made to order for me."

Finns Threaten to Quit Olympic Games

Helsingfors, Finland, April 5 (AP)—The temporary suspension of Paavo Nurmi, celebrated distance runner by the International Amateur Athletic Federation today occasioned a movement in Finland to have the country remain away from the Olympic Games this year in Los Angeles.

It is rumored out of the Finnish capital that Nurmi's suspension is not recognized and the nation-wide sentiment is said will not send a team to Los Angeles. Discussion of the rules of European amateurism to be taken up at present sessions here gave rise to the move.

"If Los Angeles wants only pure amateurs, the city had better withdraw the whole show, as no finished athletes could attend."

The charge against Nurmi seems to be the receiving of funds from amateur funds because of disagreements over expense money, at meets in Germany and Paris.

The negotiation is that Nurmi be forced to run at the athletic club meet in Koenigsberg, last fall when he would not receive his expense money before the race. An almost identical incident in Milan was also cited.

Decathlon Champion Not Eligible for Olympics

New York, April 5 (AP)—On top of the prospective loss of a number of first-class men to the Olympic games in National Amateur Athletic Union, announced today that Jackie Mercer, holder of the Los Angeles A. C. national decathlon championship and record holder is not eligible to represent the United States.

Mortensen's connection for some twelve years, the Riverside (Cal.) Junior College as a teacher in physical education, bars him from the Olympics under international rules, according to Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U. although it does not prevent him from competing in this country.

Waltham Boy Gets Pro League Trial

Johnny Natoli of Waltham, south paw twirling and hitting star leaves today for an outfield tryout with Quincy, Ill., of the Three I League. He received a gift of a purse of gold at a farewell party given him by his friends on the eve of his departure.

GRAPPLE FOR CHARITY

But not against each other, ED GEORGE, former world's champion, meets Henri DeGlane, present title holder, in a bout for the world's crown at the Arena on Thursday night. Twenty-five per cent of the proceeds will go to Mayor Curley's Unemployment Fund. TINY ROEBUCK, the former all-American football player from the Haskell Institute, meets the giant Leo Pinelszki in the semi-windup to the Jim Londos vs. Masked Marvel bout in the Garden tomorrow night. Part of the proceeds will go to the Children's Sunlight Hospital.

FANS BACKING ED GEORGE

The boys who risk a few dollars on the result of athletic contests are backing Ed Don George to lift the world's heavyweight title when he clashes with Henri DeGlane in a finish bout here tonight at 11:30 o'clock after the wrestling card at the Arena on Thursday night for the benefit of the unemployed.

The speculative element likes the way George has been picking the opposition to keep as he has swept into every big wrestling center in the country. His aggressiveness knowledge of wrestling and urge to win have enabled him to pile up a lock of victories.

Bowser today signed George for six matches when he could depend upon his winning the title from DeGlane. Paul feels that George, an American, would prove as great a box office attraction as Gus Sonnenberg was when he first beat Londos.

The colorful Nick Lutze and Jim Browning are expected to furnish a ring engagement when they meet in the semi-final. The Chicago Strack-Al Morelli match has also attracted considerable interest.

"Warner Observes 61st Birthday on Gridiron

Stanford University, Cal., April 5 (INS)—Sixty-one years ago today one of America's personalities in sport was born. Glenn S. Warner now football coach at Stanford University.

For 40 years or so Warner, labeled "Pop," has been turning out gridiron squads, usually with remarkable success.

Who is the Masked Marvel?

Jim Londos descends in the ring tonight to find out.

The Greek heavyweight is to battle the Masked Marvel in a finish bout as a show to be staged in aid of the Children's Sunlight Hospital at the Boston Garden tomorrow night.

"Give me the name of the Marvel," Londos has said to Tom Mondi. "I want to get a peek at him in his dressing room before he puts on his mask. I don't intend to let you slip Stangler Lewis, Jack Sherry or some other fellow like that into the ring with me."

"Whoever the Marvel is he is a mighty good wrestler. I am told he licked Hans Steinke with ease last week. Steinke isn't anybody's sucker. Not even Texas Guinan's.

Winn Again Heads American Turf Asso.

Chicago, April 5 (INS)—Col. Matt J. Winn, noted horse racing impresario who owns extensive track holdings in Illinois and Kentucky today began serving his second term as President of the American Turf Association.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

DAN CARROLL explains why the Sammy Fuller-Jack Berg bout in New York last Friday night didn't get started until 10:30 p. m. even though the New York Athletic Commission requires the main bout to begin at nine o'clock sharp.

"Mayor Jimmy Walker was at a dinner party," said Dan, "and some bulls ordered an extra round of cocktails. The mayor got Jimmy Johnston on the phone and asked him to delay the Fuller-Berg bout until he blew into the garden with his constituents.

"What's the good of being a mayor if you can't hold up a main bout while some of your friends are having a drink?"

Mr. Boston

I DON'T see how you can object to the commissioner's request. It seems to make things pleasant for even a fight club promoter. And if you don't believe it, ask Senator Coolidge. I met the Senator over at the Touraine hotel, and he's a swell fellow.

THERE IS real fire to the talk about a bout between Jack Dempsey and Primo Carnera. Humbert J. Fugazy and Billy Duffy would like to drop the tussle in at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, where it could draw $500,000 with a proper price scale. Dempsey, however, favors Reno where he would be the sole promoter as well as one of the principals.

THEY HAVEN'T got any boxing commission in Reno and so the former champion could make up his own rules for the tussle. If Dempsey and Carnera meet, the contest will take place on Labor Day. Schoolboy Loughran is said to be training Sharkey Bob with an eye to Jan. 16. Even light prize fighters are getting scarce.

EDDIE MACK called us on the phone and asked us to go to Providence tonight to see the Cubs-Reds match. I'm not going to Providence tonight. Mack will have to get along without me. I'm going to see Jeannette Lee and Marie Roche play the Cuban Olympic champions at the Arena on next Monday night.

THE Matchmaker says the main attractions this week that the Lardner-Bruce bout will be lost sight of if I don't do a little shouting," said the sergeant. "Bruce is a pretty good fighter and is liable to lick Lardner. Didn't want to send him down a flock of offers to battle Bruce."

Is everything clear now?

IF JOHNNY INDRISANO can get Max Baer to box a couple rounds, chances are he will have proved a lot of suspicions. Baer is a fine fighter and a good drawing card, but he has had one or two bouts in which he has, to say the least, been off his form of boxer.

He had been scheduled to fight Jack Sharkey here for a December show which never came off. Then he was matched with Jack Gagnon for tonight's show at the Arena, but after the bouts had been announced Baer complained that he was not feeling right. Indrisano says he'll be on hand tonight.

BILLY AMES calls our attention to the fact that while he is only 22 years of age, Brouillard is an ex-world's champion. He lost the title to Tuffy Griffiths after he gained it by beating Thompson

STOCKS HIT NEW LOWS; SENATE HOPES

By B. C. FORBES

READERS SOMETIMES ASK, "Where has all the money gone?"

They wonder who has "got it all." What they don't realize is that there has been a shrinkage in the market, the quoted value of securities alone of at least 75 billions of dollars—75 thousand millions. Nobody has got it. Values have simply shrunk to an amount. The rich have lost most.

What the shrinkage in the income of individuals has been nobody could possibly figure. We know only that it is staggering.

"The March value of securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange is: stocks, $27,585,989,257; bonds, $19,347,050,100

"A transfer tax of ¼ of 1 per cent on stocks and ¼ of 1 per cent on bonds is $118,148,785

"This is but another way of saying that although the American investor as suffered losses greater perhaps than any other class, they are automatically faced with an additional loss of $118,148,785 through this proposed tax.

The misrepresentatives in the House certainly have botched taxation. The peoples hope now is in the Senate. We expect to see greater statesmanship from the House than ever before.

Snares of financial companies, as well as the lowest average price in a decade. Corporation earnings, also, have been hit by the bears.

But isn't it time that bulls—those who are constructive instead of destructive—were given a little encouragement by Congress? Let the richer the bears become, the poorer become the rest of the people—and the greater the number of unfortunates thrown idle.

The latest attempt of the New York Stock Exchange governors to check short-selling has proved a fiasco.

Telling the Senate Where Voter Stands

"I particularly resent the proposed tax on the sales of stocks and bonds because it will cripple raising new capital. I favor the general sales tax. Economically I resent that states and the national government are piling up terrific taxes on the gasoline business. The government should slash to the bone all appropriations and cut down expenses of running the government, including salaries of government employes, Congressmen and Senators. I am against the bonus bill although I am an ex-soldier.

"Inform your colleagues on the floor that it is time to stop legislating for votes by attempting to soak the rich. I am against the proposed Glass banking bill. I am against rocking the boat. I am against log rolling. I am against pork barrel legislation.

"It is time both Houses of Congress ran the business of the government exactly as a business man or business organization runs their own business—cut down expenses and run the government as economically as they would their own individual affairs."

Doesn't that represent the views of most people?

New Plea for Short Sale Data

Another reader urges that the stock ticker type print the letter "S" after each short sale, thus giving "a more accurate gauge of conditions."

Somehow, the Stock Exchange governors persist in being secretly with short-selling information. Not do they give information promptly enough. Were they wiser, they would leave less excuse for Congress to interfere.

Anything at all constructive to hasten the re-employment of the millions now idle should be consciously avoided by every responsible citizen and corporation and institution whether located in Wall Street or Washington or in any city or county.

Hears:

That the trading fraternity continues skeptical of attempts to bull the market. In fact, the general attitude reflects dissatisfaction with recent legislative behavior. Until such time as proposed revenue measures become law, all rallies and tendencies toward higher price levels will be treated as mirages to turn inward them will be courting disappointment, in the opinion of able observers.

1932 HARVEST OF ICE 60 P. C. OF NORMAL

By FRANK H. MELOON

It now appears that the prospects for ice for this year than in the ice harvested from the rivers and ponds of the North has been so sharply reduced by the open winter and is estimated to be at not more than 60 per cent of the normal crop. President Charles A. Small of the American Ice Co tells me today

As it was cut and stored late in the season, much of it is no less the usual standard. Because of these conditions our company and thereby some other companies will be forced to supply many factory customers and to distributors who normally depend upon supplies on lake and river ice during the next winter of 1932-1933.

Charles A. Small

Small trusts to continue, as experience showing that a distributive rarely returns to another where once he has enjoyed the benefits that go with handling the superior manufactured product.

"As a matter of fact in recent years, manufactured ice has almost wholly replaced the natural article as a refrigerant, except in a few sections of the country.

Our own organization, and this of course includes our Boston subsidiary, the Boston Ice Company, is enthusiastic over this year's prospects. We are taking on a full line of household and commercial refrigerators, water coolers and portable comfort cooling units using ice for a refrigerant, and have made plans to merchandise these products in all of the large cities served by us.

Selling centers are being established, men are being trained in selling practice, the values are excellent, and with normal buying prevailing this summer everything points to another satisfactory year."

Bond Market Trend Irregularly Lower

The first impression, prevalent at the opening, was that the senate could not agree and if so, that no special news or comment. As a matter of fact, it had been expected the transportation group would move upward following reports from Washington that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would not permit any major receivership.

SPECTATOR

Says:

A dramatic piece of news would make the trading community take rallying more seriously than it does. With this lacking it looks like a natural recovery from an over-sold position. While it may go somewhat further, there is no incentive for trying to follow it unless a good reason develops.

METROPOLITAN TRANSIT DISTRICT

OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

20 Somerset Street, Boston
April 4, 1932

PROPOSALS FOR NOTES

Sealed proposals for Metropolitan Transit District Notes amounting to $23,125,000, at not less than par, will be received at this office until noon on Friday, April 8, 1932, at which time they will be publicly opened and read.

The principal and interest on the Notes are exempt from Massachusetts taxes, including savings bank tax, and the interest exempt from the Federal income tax. Notes of the District now outstanding, to be refunded by this issue, are legal for savings banks in Massachusetts, New York, Rhode Island, Maine and New Hampshire. This issue is legal by statute in Massachusetts and it is expected that it will be qualified in the other States mentioned.

The Notes will be dated April 15, 1932, and will mature, as to principal and interest, as specified by the Trustees of the District. Proposals must state the interest payable semi-annually October 1 and April 1. Proposals must also state the place where the principal and interest will be payable, which must be at the option of the Trustees of the District. Proposals must specify either coupon notes or registered notes, and must state the denomination desired. Proposals must be accompanied by a certified check drawn to the order of the District upon a bank or trust company in Boston.

AT CHISON PUT ON A $4 BASIS

New York, April 5 (AP). A dividend of $1 a share was declared today by the Atchison, Topka & Santa Fe Railroad Company. The company has $1 a share payable June 1, and before and at the rate of $10 a share annually.

The dividend is payable June 11 to stock of record May 6.

The company issued the following statement in connection with the dividend reductions:

"The earnings statement shows a continuing decline. The continuance of dividends on the common stock must depend upon an improvement in the corporation's earnings," it said.

Before the reduction to a $4 annual rate in January Santa Fe had paid $2.50 quarterly since June, 1928. In 1927 and 1928 $10 a share was paid partly in extra disbursements.

The company has been paying common dividends since 1901 in varying amounts from $3.50 as the minimum for any year.

Grains Are Easier in Chicago Market

Wheat finished 1 to 1¼c lower, corn ten down, oats ¼c up to ¼c down and rye 1 to 1¼c lower.

Late trading in wheat was featureless with the market showing some signs of being over-bought. Liverpool wheat futures closed ¾d higher.

Sharp Decline in Curb Market Prices

"Synthetic Meals of Air and Sunlight in Prospect," says a headline.

It's certainly a surprise to us. We never thought the Democrats would go that far in their anti-administration propaganda.

TODAY'S HEARTBREAK STORY

Little tragedies are enacted all about us—yet how few of us realize that behind the hearty smile, the inane quirk, there beats a breaking heart. Like for example, the case of Hamlet's Feathertop Nose. For years he must officers sit trained to call studied to be a straight face and not registered pharmacist. And then the board of examiners refused to certify him merely because he absent-mindedly put a dash of whipped cream and sprinkled nuts into the test prescription.

Simile—

Balled up as a woman's checkbook.

"And furthermore," observes Gen. Grievous, the kitchen cynic, "entirely too many citizens are waiting until middle-age to make youthful mistakes."

FINANCIAL ADVICE FOR THE FRIENDLESS

Perhaps you will be a widow someday. Who knows?

What do you plan to do with your insurance money?

Wouldn't you like a little outside income? Here are a few suggestions, per example, upon a go-fathered story to illustrate a point and then a hole. Hamlet's last something out of the ice box and go to a lot of bother. Our for years he must officers sit trained to call studied to be a straight face and not register. We figure that it is the board of examiners refused to certify him merely because he absent-mindedly put a dash of whipped cream and sprinkled nuts into the test prescription.

NEWS for MORONS; 20,000,000 WISE GUYS IN EXISTENCE

By GILBERT SELDES

remarkable instances of the capacity of human beings to act without intelligence. I was unable to supply data; not from lack of experience, but from lack of assurance. All I could say (and I said it through his column) was that the leaders of mankind, the superior people, the saints, philosophers, artists and intellectuals were as subdued to error as the dullest moron in the world. In fact it appeared, and still appears to me, not to be worth while to catalogue the stupidities of the stupid; those can be taken for granted. The stupidity of the intelligent is what makes the gods weep; unless they have planned and intended it all along, in which case they are entitled to their laugh.

GILBERT SELDES

All Are Dumb

Now the history is published—an immense folio of nearly six hundred pages, called "A Short Introduction to the History of Human Stupidity" (Simon and Schuster). I suspect irony lurking in the title; little of it gets into the book, which strikes me as, itself, a masterly example of lack of intelligence. Prof. Pitkin has not fallen into the trap of boob-baiting; the striking passages in his book are those in which he calls famous men by short and ugly names, reserving Greek titles and designations for the general run of humanity. Kitchener, Clemenceau, Curzon, Wilson, Coolidge, "Beethoven and Whitman, and Schubert" can be fatally dull to many of the best things in life," bankers, politicians, Hamilton Fish — everybody is stupid; everybody, naturally, except the author, whose Olympian judiciousness extracts the error from the accomplished fact.

100 Years Too Late

I do not mean that Prof. Pitkin is self-righteous. He is simply pouring out a flood of reproof and objection against the course the world has taken. He admires clear thinking, direct cutting through the unreal to a new and refreshing sound sense; he hates bigotries and superstition. All this is admirable. But in this work, which covers everything from newspapers to wars, from chemistry to politics, the impressive thing is only that a hundred years after a decision has been made we can see that it was the wrong decision. And that is only impressive because it is repeated so often.

"Mistakes of Moses"

Was it stupid of Napoleon to go into Russia? The collapse of France and, as a result, the present plight of Europe may be traced to that disaster; successful in Russia, Napoleon might have founded a dynasty and created the United States of Europe. I am willing to grant you that Napoleon had dulness and stupidities. As a military man he should have known that he could not support the Russian campaign. Yet it is still quite possible that, had he succeeded, the dark ages of Europe would have been even greater. In that case would the Russian campaign have been a greater stupidity or a less?

A Hand for Iowa

All the generals were wrong in the Great War; all the economists were wrong in the great depression; all the philosophers were always wrong. The Spaniards are a stupid race; the Russians are a stupid race; "the Iowa hog raiser and farmer . . . knows fifty times more about the world at large" than the editor of a provincial French newspaper. "The typical Frenchman is an ignoramus whose intellectual conceit makes him a menace." Only Pitkin a hand for not confining himself to the old game of running down America.)

We do not know how to eat intelligently, let alone how to think. We crowd ourselves in cities, deprive ourselves of fresh air, live on tablets for indigestion, haven't conquered the common cold, we smoke and drink. The Russian moujik is virtually walking in his sleep through half his adult life. The money men of England were and are feeble-minded.

Good News at Last

I have saved the good news for the end, although I cannot be sure how good it is because Pitkin gives two sets of figures. In one place he says that of the earth's two billion men and women, "not more than five or six million think and act with progressive intelligence." In another he says "there are . . . at the most conservative estimate, at least 20,000,000 men, women and children among the English-speaking peoples alone whose intelligence surpasses that of the other 170,000,000. These 20,000,000 constitute a distinct cultural upper class . . . They include thousands of brilliant minds who can invent, manufacture and use every tool, every instrument and every executive method needed for the making of the highest type of civilization and the richest kind of life." All they need to do is to get together with similar superiors of other nations!

Not a Chance

They won't, because the world is stupid. Because it is, apparently, not made to be run by intelligence. Because, as Santayana says, "there is a clown and a circus animal inside of us; the intelligent man known to history flourishes within a dullard and holds a lunatic in leash." Yet he is intelligent, and his stupidity is part of his wit; for to be always alert, always doing the thing which will turn out right in the end, would be a stupid way to live. We have to leave something behind for the intelligent ones to criticize. But we might as well remember that all their criticism is what the French call staircase wit—the right remark which occurs to us after the opportunity has stepped outside the door.

And to console Prof. Pitkin: Goethe was fond of the story of a German philosopher, a little mad with thinking, who cried out, "I can detect some errors in God himself."

CROWD at AUTO EXHIBITION

Saturday more than 35,000 visitors streamed into the hall, and judging from the crowd waiting admission early today the mark established bids fair to be broken.

One of the features expected to attract interest is the automobile from which emanate voices and music without any apparent human contrivance. The lights of the car flash on and off of their own accord. So far, no one has been able to determine what operates this curious exhibit.

Another feature of the exhibit is the music of George Ventre and his General Motor Orchestra, who plays daily and evenings throughout the week until the close of the show April 9 to 11 o'clock.

Indications that the buying season is underway is evidenced by a number of orders taken so far.

TODAY'S HEARTBREAK STORY

Little tragedies are enacted all about us—yet how few of us realize that behind the hearty smile, the inane smirk, there beats a breaking heart. Take, for example, the case of J. Hamhock Feathernose. For years he studied to be a registered pharmacist. And then the board of examiners refused to certify him merely because he absent-mindedly put a dash of whipped cream and sprinkled nuts into the test prescription.

FINANCIAL ADVICE FOR THE FRIENDLESS

Perhaps you will be a widow some day. Who knows?

What do you plan to do with your insurance money?

Wouldn't you like a little confidential advice, a few statistics, perhaps a good-natured story to illustrate a point, and then a bite?—just something out of the ice box. Don't go to a lot of bother. Our best officers are trained to eat what is set before them and not otherize. We figure that it is the spirit behind the lunch—not the actual victuals that count. And then something gotten together in a hurry tastes better to our experts than a pretentious four-deck sandwich that only Joe E. Brown could appreciate. Or, if you prefer, our gents will bring a can opener, someone else can bake a cake, and, with a few sandwiches—there you are.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy Is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

NEWS FOR MORONS; 20,000,000 WISE GUYS IN EXISTENCE

—By GILBERT SELDES—

LATE LAST SPRING Professor Walter B. Pitkin announced that he had been collecting material for a "History of Human Stupidity" and asked a number of newspaper writers to give him a remarkable instances of the capacity of human beings to act without intelligence. I was unable to supply data; not from lack of experience, but from lack of assurance. All I could say (and I said it through his column) was that the leaders of mankind, the superior people, the saints, philosophers, artists and intellectuals were as subdued to error as the dullest moron in the world. In fact it appeared, and still appears to me, not to be worth while to catalogue the stupidities of the stupid; those can be taken for granted. The stupidity of the intelligent is what makes the gods weep; unless they have planned and intended it all along, in which case they are entitled to their laugh.

Copyright, 1932

All Are Dumb

Now the history is published—an immense folio of nearly six hundred pages, called "A Short Introduction to the History of Human Stupidity," (Simon and Schuster). I suspect irony lurking in the title; little if it gets into the book, which strikes me as, itself, a masterly example of lack of intelligence. Prof. Pitkin has not fallen into the trap of book-building; the striking passages in his book are those in which he calls famous men by short and ugly names, reserving Greek titles and designations for the general run of humanity. Kitchener, Clemenceau, Curzon, Wilson, Coolidge, "Beethoven and Whitman, who turn out to be fatally dull to many of the best things in life," bankers, politicians, Hamilton Fish — everybody is stupid; everybody, naturally, except the author, whose Olympian judiciousness extracts the error from the accomplished fact.

100 Years Too Late

I do not mean that Prof. Pitkin is self-righteous. He is simply pouring out a flood of reproof and objection against the course the world has taken. He admires clear thinking, direct cutting through the unreal to get to the real, sound sense; he hates fogginess and superstition. All this is admirable. But in this work, which covers everything from newspapers to the movies, from politics to the impressive thing is only that a hundred years after a decision has been made we can see that it was the wrong decision. And that is only impressive because it is repeated so often.

"Mistakes of Moses"

Was it stupid of Napoleon to go into Russia? The collapse of France and, as a result, the present plight of Europe may be traced to that disaster; succeeding in Russia, he would have founded not a dynasty and created the United States of Europe. I grant you that; grant you that Napoleon had dulness and stupidities. As a military man he should have known that he could not support the Russian campaign. Yet it is quite possible that, had he succeeded, the disaster of Europe would have been even greater. In that case would the Russian campaign have been a greater stupidity or a less?

A Hand for Iowa

All the generals were wrong in the Great War; all the economists were wrong in the great depression; all the philosophers ward always wrong. The Spanish-American War, we have found out, was a stupid race; "the Iowa hog farmer . . . knows fifty times more about the world at large" than the editor of a provincial French newspaper. "The typical French provincial ignoramus whose intellectual conceit makes him a menace." (Give Pitkin a hand for not confining himself to the old game of running down America.)

We do not know how to eat intelligently, let alone how to think. We crowd ourselves to distention, we ourselves of fresh air, live on tablets for indigestion, haven't conquered the common cold, we smoke and drink. The Russian moujik is virtually walking in the nude; he enjoys half his adult life. The money men of England were and are feeble-minded.

Good News at Last

I have saved the good news for the end, although I cannot be sure how good it is because Pitkin gives two sets of figures. In one place he says that of the earth's two billion men and women, "not more than five or six million think and act with progressive intelligence." Six million is the most conservative estimate, at least 20,000,000 men, women and children among the English-speaking peoples alone whose intelligence surpasses that of the other 170,000,000. These 20,000,000 constitute a distinct cultural upper class . . . they include thousands of brilliant minds who can invent, manufacture and use every tool, every instrument and every executive method needed for the making and distributing of all the necessities and comforts of life." All they need to do is to get together with similar superiors of other nations!

Not a Chance

They won't, because the world is stupid. Because it is, apparently, not made to be run by intelligence. Because, as Santayana says, there is a clown and a dumb animal inside of us; "the intelligent man known to history flourishes within a world and a mind of which he is but a leash." Yet he is intelligent, and his stupidity is part of his wit; for to be always alert, always doing the thing which will turn out right in the end, would be a stupid way to live. We have to leave something behind for the intelligent ones to criticize. But we might as well remember that all their criticism is what the French call staircase wit—the right remark which occurs to us after the opportunity has stepped outside the door.

And to console Prof. Pitkin: Goethe was fond of the story of a German philosopher, a little mad with thinking, who cried out, "I can detect some errors in God himself."

CROWD AT AUTO EXHIBITION

Saturday more than 35,000 visitors streamed into the hall, and judging from the crowd waiting admission early today the mark established bids fair to be broken.

One of the features expected to attract interest is the automobile from which emanate voices and music without any apparent human constrivance. The lights of the car flash on and off of their own accord. So far, no one has been able to determine what operates this curious exhibit.

Another feature of the exhibit is the music of George Ventre and his General Motor Orchestra, who plays daily and evenings throughout the week until the close of the show April 9 to 11 o'clock.

Indications that the buying season is underway is evidenced by a number of orders taken so far.

How Important the Auto Is in Our Daily Life

According to the latest available statistics there are more automobiles in use in the United States than telephones—23,000,000 motor cars, 20,000,000 telephones.

And with due consideration for the convenience of the telephone, the figures give a fair ratio of the relative importance of these American necessities. One in every five persons in the United States owns an automobile, and that fraction could well be lowered, with benefit to the people who would be added to the ranks of motorists and to the improvement of industrial conditions. For the automobile industry now ranks first among American manufacturing activities when measured by the wholesale value of its product.

Those facts and many others are included in a broadside issued by the Motor Car Dealers Association of Southern California.

It is shown how relatively cheap the automobile has become. The automobile dollar of today, as compared to that of 1914, will buy twice as much value as will the dollar spent for food under the same comparison.

The automobile industry gives work to 5,056,000 persons out of the 48,800,000 normally gainfully employed in the United States. And nearly the full cost of the automobile bought today is a contribution to employment, aiding not only those engaged in building the car itself, but lumbermen, glass workers, rubber workers, iron and steel workers, oil men, road builders. For the automobile factories are the best buyers of many products and the automobile user is chiefly responsible for both the gasoline and the road building industries.

The automobile has revolutionized both the industrial and social life of the American farmer. Each year the farmer hauls 200,000,000 tons of produce to market by motor transport, and the passenger car has obliterated his isolation from town life.

These facts are evident to the observer, but the motor dealers have performed a service in summarizing them.

The motor industry does not stand on the corner with hat in hand, pleading for patrons. But it does show clearly and effectively these two things:

That the purchase of a car at today's cheap prices will materially advance restoration of normal business conditions—and that possession of an automobile gives its owner and his family a luxurious magic carpet and a necessary adjunct to modern life, combined.

Rate Facts Wanted

The Public Franchise League has requested Governor Ely to compel a statement to be made to the public of the relationships between the holding corporations and the numerous independent gas and electric companies taken under their wing the past few years.

The League would like to have the public of Massachusetts informed of a few salient facts:

1—The identity of the Massachusetts gas and electric companies which have been absorbed by holding corporations.

2—The amount of dividends distributed by these companies and the amount of fees and other expenses paid by these companies to their holding corporations.

The request is an important one. But it is simple of performance and there can be no reasonable excuse for not granting it promptly and whole-heartedly.

When these facts are obtained, the people of Massachusetts will be in a better position to judge whether they are paying reasonable rates to these companies for gas and electricity.

Or, they may judge whether they are being charged excessive rates to pay exterionate dividends and extraordinary fees to the holding corporations which have acquired such a heavy interest in these fine old Massachusetts lighting and power plants.

The Department of Public Utilities has these facts at its disposal, and should be compelled to publish them in a manner which the public can readily understand.

The Future Is Sweet

It will not faze the young, brought up on Mother Goose, to learn that bridges, houses and subway tunnels can be made of sugar, or a good proportion of it. Witches had the knack of this toffee construction. So had the old Romans. They mixed plenty of sugar in lime when they built the Forum and what not, and their structures stood the test of rain for a couple of thousand years.

Five or six pounds of sugar to each hundred pounds of lime will make stone or brickwork sixty per cent stronger, the Mellon Institute informs us.

Considering that we have to import eight billion pounds of sugar a year, it doesn't look as if we could afford to let the masons dip too deeply into our sugar bowl. But here's news. Sugar is now being extracted from corn, from milk, Jerusalem artichokes, goldenrod, burdock and dahlias and spinach. From everything, almost, except straw hats and rusty auto frames.

It looks now as if the farmer will soon be coming into the heavy sugar.

She Killed Her Mother

A woman in Amesbury killed her mother, who lay in bed. She then placed the revolver against her own temple and killed herself.

The mother was 88, the daughter 67. The mother suffered the illnesses and infirmities consequent upon old age. The daughter, a capable business woman, is understood to have sustained losses in the stock market.

This tragedy will produce conflicting reactions in the public mind. There will be said, if justification can be found for it, that the unfortunate woman was torn by grief for her mother's long illness and further rendered incompetent by her own financial reverses as the culmination of a life of hard work.

But it usually takes greater courage to live with our troubles and to face the unpromising future. Life is given to us by a Power above and beyond us. And it is not within the rightful province of man to sacrifice or end that life.

New York Day by Day

"Noblest Roman"

NEW YORK, April 5—At a recent banquet a distinguished toastmaster, pointing to William Travers Jerome, exclaimed: "There, gentlemen, sits the noblest Roman of them all!" The descriptions fits like the proverbial glove. He is last of the valiant vice crusaders of yesterday.

Now in early 70's, he is a rugged cameo out of a fighting era, and the only district attorney to twist the Tammany Tiger's tail and send that blood-thirsty beast whimpering to its lair. Ask anyone in any part of America to name any New York district attorney. They will name Jerome.

Others come with beating of tomtoms and vanish into utter obscurity. But after 25 years, Jerome is as well known as a U. S. President. This despite his utter indifference to the spotlight. Publishers send him blank checks vainly for his autobiography. He returns them without comment.

Similar efforts have been made for talkies, syndicated memoirs, etc. He's not interested. He visits his office for down tow at intervals, but most of the time is spent in the library of his peaceful home town near Yonkers—"that largest city in the world next to New York."

Jerome especially endeared himself to such reporters as Irvin Cobb, Martin Green, George Buchanan Fife and others during the days he was the nemesis of Harry K. Thaw. In court his irony was biting. But at recess he dropped into a bar across the street to chaff with reporters, who loved and respected him.

It was Jerome who unhorsed Richard Croker. A neologist of the day coined the term "jeromed," meaning finished in the underworld. Jerome also tossed the biggest scare of Sing Sing a corrupt police system ever had. He put Richard Canfield out of business.

In harness he was the lone wolf, suspicious even of th reformers. Frequently he snarled: "I'm running wildcat"—meaning he would turn on those he trusted who betrayed him. He is one of the fiercest cigarette smokers on record, suggesting the Olympic's left funnel.

Lou Holtz has not yet succumbed to the dinner jacket or full evening regalia. His compromise is a blue serge with black four-in-hand. Another sartorial indifferent is the lantern-jawed Groucho Marx, who affects morning coat with striped trousers at evening functions. The dapper George White wore his first full dress in public at the famous Casino party.

Sometimes, however, I feel much stuff of the seasonal drama has little to commend itself over the circus lot hula. More than half the plays, two of them smash hits, are concerned with the glorification of the mistress.

The flood of manuscripts to magazine offices has reached fullest tide. So many with time on their hands consider writing one of the minor rackets which anyone may enter. Looking about, they may be right.

Arthur Caesar, writing from Hollywood, calls it: "Out where the yen begins." The biggest laugh in Ziegfeld's "Hot-Cha!" is when an American cabaret girl in Mexico complains of the "Leblang lovers" —the sort who try to get her out on the balcony.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

That Blah Feeling

HERE ARE questions every human being asks at some time.

"Why do I get fed up on everything, every now and then," a woman writes me. "Do you know what I mean, Elsie Robinson—that blah mood, as if everything was unreal; nothing mattered?

"I tell myself it should matter. I see scores of things in which I should be interested. But while that mood is on, I can't get excited about anything. I can't even feel love. It is as if I were walking around in a dream. Do other people get that way? If they do, what's the reason? And is there a cure?"

Yes, other people get that way. All of us get that way. And the reason isn't hard to find. It's not in the least remarkable that we should have "blah moods"—when we "can't feel anything—not even love." The miracle is that we have any other moods; that we are able to live so richly in our emotions.

For man, like all other animals, is naturally a blah creature. The savage in the jungle has his moments of ecstasy, rage, excitement and curiosity, but for the most part he's as torpid as a turnip. His body continues to function, but his mind and feelings loaf on the job.

And this is both natural and necessary. Thinking and feeling are a comparatively new job for the human animal. He has had walking legs and striking fists and a hungry stomach for a very long time, but he has had thoughts, emotions and self-consciousness for a comparatively short time. And they are not an unmitigated blessing.

Thinking and feeling are a tiresome, often a painful business. The body rebels against that business. It wants to do the things that are easy to do—things it can do without planning, without making decisions. It wants to lie in the sun, and eat, and sleep, and fight, and make love. All of these things can be done with little thought or feeling, as an animal does them. And we humans are still nine-tenths brute.

Why do you have these blah moods?

That's why.

Because the mental side of you, still so new at its job, goes on a strike. Temporarily you revert to your stupid, happy, lazy jungle self.

But is there no cure for that?

Probably not, within the next million or so years.

And why should there be a cure?

Why this frantic desire to "think and feel all the time"—this constant, hysterical search for a thrill?

"That's because we want to live in high! We refuse to be dead ones. We moderns are live wires."

Piffle! We moderns are nothing of the sort. We merely have the nervous jitters; and most of our so-called thoughts and feelings are as senseless and aimless as a monkey's chatter.

Our trouble is not that we can't use our brains all he time, but that we seldom use them ANY OF THE TIME!

Don't rebel because there are times when you can't think or feel. That is natural. It is the penalty of being that new creature, a human being.

Ask, rather, that you may make good use of the times when you can think and can feel. When those times come—try to think like a man; try to feel like a man.

If you'll think one REAL Grade A human thought a day, register one REAL Grade A human feeling, you can safely park your brain on a bush for the rest of the time.

Just Folks

Strange Woman

I know a little lady who is very fair to see
And she never has an angry word to say.
In her present circumstances she's contented as can be
And she never runs up bills for me to pay.

Prudes may think that she's immodest, for her gown is very thin,
But she pays no heed to any bitter tongue.
There's a fascinating dimple in the middle of her chin
And it's time, I think, her praises should be sung.

She doesn't mind the weather. In the winter when it's cold
She braves the chilling breezes heat she can,
In the summer she is happy in the draperies which enfold
And I know she never smiles at any man.

She never asks for money, and when we're invited out
Never tells me she has nothing fit to wear;
Her mind is never troubled by the fear of growing stout,
And she never has to finger wave her hair.

She's a graceful little person, very beautiful and trim,
But she never quotes a Culbertson demand,
Though all the other women are forever citing him,
The game of bridge she doesn't understand.

It's not difficult to please her. I have never heard her fret;
If I stay out late she doesn't care a rap.
She's the chromium diving Venus on a base of metal set
On my automobile radiator cap.

Money and Factories of Americans

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

WHEN THE HISTORIAN of the future comes to write the bizarre story of the last twelve years in the United States under the domination of the "best minds," from the multiplicity of odorous scandals in the Harding regime to the Hoover panic, he will find much to interest him, and his readers, in the subserviency of the present regime to the big banking interests. It now seems possible that we shall not have to wait on the historian for the story of just what happened in the case of the Missouri Pacific loan; and just why it happened.

The interference of the President in this instance, in something which is none of his business, is probably the most flagrant disregard of the law and the constitutional limitations of power in his record. Now that Senator Couzens, who in financial matters is wise in his generation, has spoken out, it is imperative that there be a showdown and an investigation Money — $2,000,000,000 — belonging to the people's treasury, and extracted from the pockets of all the people, has been set aside for loans and assistance to banks, railroads, etc.

In the case of the Missouri Pacific, $5,850,000 is generously assigned the road that it may pay back a loan made by J. P Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co.. This sort of thing was not intended by Congress when it generously assigned the two billions to help out Big Business —which has made such a sorry mess of things.

Reconstruction Commission Approved the Loan

We return to this subject because it is such an enlightening indication of the trend of the Administration which is shocked unbearably at the suggestion that a penny shall be used to feed the jobless who are hungry.

Under the law the loan could not have been made without the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission. But it appears that the Reconstruction Corporation, headed by Mr. Dawes, approved this loan, by resolution, before the Interstate Commerce Commission had begun to study the application.

The Interstate Commerce Commission was unfavorably impressed with the proposed loan. Mr. Eastman, a member, is on record. He says:

"No good reason has been shown for approving a Government loan to enable the applicant to make a 50 per cent payment on the bank loan maturing April 1. I would have no difficulty in joining in such approval if there were any guidance that the loan were needed in the public interest. But no one has made or attempted to make such a showing. . . . Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the Guaranty Trust Company would not, so long as the interest on the bank loan is paid, force a receivership by refusing an extension. . . . I realize that the majority (of the Interstate Commerce Commission) are no more persuaded than I am that there is any need for using Government funds to 'bail out' these banks."

"Too Much Is Enough"

And yet the commission, feeling this way, did agree against its judgment and its sense of propriety—under pressure. This pressure we are told came from the White House.

If that is true it is a shocking thing.

All the more shocking, Senator Couzens and others think because of the moral obligations on the "money merchants" to grant an extension in appreciation of the fact that they have "profited largely" in handling the financing of the road in the past.

But the banks, groaning with hoarded money, want their money back.

But if they can get their money back now by dipping into the $2,000,000,000 of the people's money, appropriated from the people's treasury, by having pressure brought upon the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by the President, who has no right to bring any pressure, they want it.

And so they get it.

This incident imposes upon Congress the duty to scrutinize the use of this money of the people's; and the people have a right to know.

"Too much is enough."

"Using Our Wealth to Destroy Our Trade"

In an article by Theodor Knappen, in the Magazine of Wall Street, we learn more about the effect of the Chinese tariff wall we have erected at our ports. This wall not only keeps goods out, but prevents goods from going out. And this is not only wrecking the great Atlantic ship lines, but the railroads of America; and, as we have pointed out before, forcing American factories to build plants in other countries with American capital to employ foreign labor.

Mr. Knappen tells us that Henry Ford's plant in Cork, Ireland, shipped 2000 "Fordson" tractors, valued at $1,169,713, to the United States duty free.

And the 2000 tractors sent to the American market were made by foreign workingmen, paid with American money which they spent with foreign merchants.

This merely illustrates what is happening under the operations of the present prohibitive tariff. Ford is not alone. Now that England, following the rest of Europe in retaliation, has put up the bars against the products of American factories and fields, we are told that the result is to "send American branch factories to England in swarms."

And Mr. Knappen concludes that "we are using our wealth to destroy our foreign trade." For every branch factory that goes to Europe to get beyond our Chinese wall deprives American workingmen of jobs.

What Spain Is Doing

Spain wants factories.

She wants these Spanish workingmen to get wages that will be spent with Spanish merchants.

She thinks that American manufacturers will establish branch factories in Spain so that American cars sold there will be made by Spanish and not by American workingmen.

Return to Common Sense Tariffs

The hysterical trend toward prohibitive tariffs followed immediately after the United States, responding to the lash of Joe Grundy, built its Chinese wall against trade. For we have reached a point where nothing can be safely done for the restoration of international trade except through the negotiation of reciprocal agreements.

The House has passed a bill asking the President to enter into such negotiations and to take the initiative by calling an international conference on trade relations. It is still pending in the Senate.

Conditions will continue to grow worse so long as trade diminishes at home and abroad; and trade will continue to grow worse until we return to common sense tariffs and restore the purchasing power of the forty million Americans who are wrecked by our stupid economic policies.
